Cong States set to block NPR Drop in biting cold

NEW DELHI

The Centre and States are headed for a major confrontation on the implementation of the National Population Register (NPR). After Mamata Banerjee-led West Bengal and Left-led Kerala Governments refused to implement the NPR approved by the Union Cabinet last week, the Congress- ruled States too are set to reject it in its existing format.

Launching a fresh offensive against the Modi Government, former Congress chief Rahul Gandhi likened the NPR and the National Register of Citizens (NRC) to demonetisation, and said these exercises are a "tax" on the poor, who will suffer the same way they did after the note ban in November 2016.

A senior Congress leader told The Pioneer that the partyled State Governments would not implement the NPR since it seeks to extract details similar to the NRC. The Congress leadership has questioned the very motive of the Government to seek details like declaration of "date and place of birth of both parents" for the first time in the NPR forms. Sources said party has asked its Chief Ministers to reject the NPR.

Congress Governments in States have already criticised the controversial CAA and NRC that led to mass mobilisation and protests across the country during the last fortnight.

A formal announcement is likely to be made when the party conducts flag marches across the country for its "Save India, Save Constitution" on Saturday coinciding with the grand old party's foundation day. Then Minister of State for Home in the UPA Government Ajay Maken on Friday charged the Centre with working on the NRC across the country in the garb of the NPR.

Home Minister Amit Shah has clarified that there is no link between the NPR and the NRC. "NPR is register of population, NRC is register of citizens. There is no link between the two and the two have different processes," Shah said in an interview with a news agency early this week.

Maken sought to buttress the point by citing that the NPR forms are seeking information like mobile numbers of all family members and driving licence details which had not been sought when the NPR was last conducted in the 2010-11 by the UPA Government.

Government's contention that these details were to be shared voluntarily and not mandatorily. "The NPR forms have an ambiguous if available' clause. Anybody who does not share these details would run the risk of his citizenship being deemed doubtful," Maken explained to The Pioneer.

Asserting that the NRC has always been on the BJP's agenda, Maken pointed out that way back in 2003 when the NDA was in power it had brought out an amendment in the Citizenship Act seeking to make registration of every citizen compulsory.

"When the Congress came to power in 2004, there was a pilot project carried out in a union territory with a small population of 3.1 million. We junked it, though the BJP had sought to implement it across the country, as it was found that less than half of the residents could produce valid documents. Most of them were poor who had no means to be in possession of documentary proof of citizenship," the Congress leader pointed out. In the last NPR, data was collected on 15 criteria. This time data on 21 points will be

The minimum temperature was recorded at 4.2 degrees Celsius, three notches below normal in Delhi. The India Meteorological Department (IMD) predicts some relief in the region from December 31 opwards December 31 onwards.

Severe cold wave conditions have been recorded for 14 continuous days so far, surpassing 13 continuous days in 1997. According to the IMD, from December 29-30, the wind direction will change from northwesterly to easterly, which is likely to reduce cold wave.

In its daily weather report, the IMD said due to the persistence of cold northwesterly winds in the lower levels over northwest India and other favourable meteorological conditions, "cold day to severe cold day conditions" are very likely over many pockets of Punjab, Haryana, Chandigarh, Delhi, north Rajasthan and Uttar Pradesh for the next two days.

North-East and central India has been reeling under a spell of severe cold wave conditions over the last week. The Severe cold wave conditions till Dec 30

IMD also predicted snowfall in middle and high hills from December 31 to January 2. The IMD said a fresh western disturbance is very likely to affect the western Himalayan region from December 30 night onwards and this will bring rain and thunderstorm in isolated pockets of north, northwest and central India.

"Dense fog at isolated pockets is also very likely over Punjab, Haryana, Chandigarh, Delhi, north Rajasthan and Uttar Pradesh during next three days and over north Madhya Pradesh, Bihar, Jharkhand, sub-Himalayan West Bengal, Sikkim and Odisha during next two days and over northeastern India during next 4-5 days and abate thereafter," it said.

Under the western disturbance, major parts of northwest and central India are likely to experience fairly widespread rainfall accompanied with hailstorm at isolated places during December 31-January 1, it said. Continued on Page 4 mid tight security arrangements, with Adrones keeping an eye from the sky, the Friday prayers passed off peacefully in Uttar Pradesh with no untoward incident reported from anywhere after last week's anti-Citizenship (Amendment) Act protests that left 19 dead.

"The entire State was peaceful," Uttar Pradesh Director General of Police OP

Singh told reporters in Lucknow. The State was placed under a thick security cover with deployment of central paramilitary forces in sensitive areas. As a precautionary measure, Internet services which were resumed after nearly a week, were suspended again in over 20 of the 75 UP districts, including Ghaziabad, Bulandshahr, Meerut, Muzaffarnagar, Shamli and Agra to check rumour-mongering, officials said.

Drones were also used to keep a vigil, particularly in areas where violence had broken out last week after Friday prayers. Protesters had hurled stones at policemen and set vehicles on fire. Reports from Moradabad, Amroha and Hathras districts said the juma namaz was offered at various mosques and the congregations dispersed peacefully.

In Lucknow, a heavy deployment of paramilitary force personnel was seen outside the historic Tiley Wali Masjid in the Old City area.

In Ajmer, a large number of Muslims, including khadims of the Ajmer dargah, took out a protest march and burnt an effigy of Deewan Zainul Abedin Ali Khan, the spiritual head of the dargah, accusing him of misleading Muslims on the issue of the amended Citizenship Act.

Delhi Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal and Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) national convener has said that decongesting roads from heavy traffic jams will be one of the main agendas among others in the next five years, if it will manage to regain the power for the next term. The Chief Minister was addressing the second town hall meeting on Friday.

Replying to a question asked by a resident of Pitampura on traffic congestion in the national Capital, he said, 'We have designated a consultant to create a list of the locations in Delhi where there are daily traffic jams. The designated consultant will provide us with a roadmap or a report within 9-10 months on how to solve the problem of traffic congestion in these locations. We will start working on resolving congestion issues on each road mentioned in the list.

and we will be able to do it at the earliest. Just as we have worked on addressing issues in the fields of education, health, power, water, sewer, and drainage, etc in the last five years, we will work on resolv-ing traffic congestion issues in the next five years."

Kejriwal during his address in Pitampura area said that his party will release the AAP manifesto in mid January which will carry all the issues and problems which will be solved in the next term.

AAP Chief further said, "after the election the key focus of the Government will be at making Delhi traffic-free and providing 24*7 drinking water from the tap.'

The Town Hall Meeting is part of AAP election campaign for the upcoming Vidhan Sabha polls. During the interaction, the CM informed the people that the AAP will make the Manifesto for the 2020 election after the consultations with the people through these meetings. The meeting aimed to discuss 'AAP ka Report Card' which was launched by Kejriwal on 24th December.

During the event, the CM interacted with the public answered questions and presented the Report Card featuring the top 10 achievements of the Delhi Government in the past 5 years.

When the public discussed the issue of water in the area with the CM, he drank a glass of water from a nearby located tap in front of the people to describe how the AAP Government has worked to develop the water infrastructure of Delhi.

"When our Government was formed five years back, around 2,300 areas in Delhi received contaminated water. We created a list of all such locations as well as causes of the contamination and deployed various resources for the resolution of the issue in each of those areas. Now, only 150 areas in Delhi receive contaminated water, and we are working on providing clean water to these areas as well. When our Government was formed, only 58% of colonies in Delhi received tap water, and the rest of the colonies received water from water tankers. Now, 93% of Delhi receives tap water. Our next step is to provide a 24hour water supply to the people of Delhi," said Kejriwal.

However, refuting BJP's claim, Delhi Government said that it is unfair to compare Delhi Government schools with Centre-run Kendriya Vidvalayas that admit students through entrance tests.

Public Policy Research Centre (PPRC), BJP think tank has prepared the report on the state of education in Delhi based on around 1,000 RTI replies received from the AAP Government in last three months.

BJP Jan meet to reach out to Muslims on CAA

Seeking to counter the Opposition's campaign on citizenship issues, the BJP is likely to organise a national-level conference in January to reach out to Muslims.

Senior BJP leader and Minority Affairs Minister Mukhtar Abbas Naqvi on Friday held a meeting, which was attended by National Commission for Minorities chairman Ghavorul Hasan Rizvi and some key Muslim BJP leaders, to chalk out a strategy in this regard.

Sources said BJP leader Ghayorul Hasan Rizvi and the party's minority morcha president Abdul Rasheed Ansari also attended the meeting. The idea is to "demolish misinformation campaign" being carried out by some political parties on the new citizenship law, NRC and NPR, they said adding the party has launched a nationwide campaign to create awareness over these issues.

A national-level conference will be organised in the first week of January to inform Muslims about the key aspects of these issues and "how the opposition is spreading confusion", they said.

Rahul is liar of the year: BJP

PNS NEW DELHI

The BJP on Friday dubbed Congress leader Rahul Gandhi as the "liar of the year" after he claimed that the National Population Register is a "tax" on the poor. His comments have "embarrassed" people and his Congress party, senior BJP leader and Union Minister Prakash Javadekar

Javadekar also accused the Congress of trying to fan instability in the country but asserted that people are with the government on the new citizenship law and NPR. The NPR does not involve any monetary transaction and its data is used to identify the poor so that government welfare schemes could reach the targeted people, he said.

A similar exercise was undertaken in 2010 as well, he said.

When Rahul Gandhi was Congress resident, he would say anything and speak lie all the time. Now he is no longer president but continues to speak lies. If there were a category of the liar of the year, he would be its recipient. His comments used to embarrass his family. His lies now embarrass his party and entire country," Javadekar told reporters.

Ahead of the Delhi Assembly polls, the mantra for the Centre is slum-specific welfare measures for the national Capital. After its initiative to regularise 1,731 unauthorised colonies, the HUA Ministry has lined up a plan to build 2 lakh houses under the Pradhan Mantri Awas Yojana (PMAY-Urban) in the slums of Delhi in Kalkakji Extension, Dilshad Garden, Ashok Vihar, Kathputli Colony among oth-

The move is targeted at 10 lakh beneficiaries from the slums, which are a major votebank for the AAP. The BJPruled Centre's focus is thus on such clusters both to make inroads into the ruling dispensation's stronghold as also to negate the impact of its various freebie schemes. The ministry also announced that the total number of houses being funded under the scheme to 1.3 crore under the housing for all

Addressing a press confer-

Singh Puri on Friday accused the AAP government of trying to create hurdles in implementation of the PMAY-Urban in Delhi and said its political approach is based on a "pack of lies". Puri's allegations came three days after Delhi Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal launched the Mukhyamantri Awas Yojana (MMAY) for Jhugi Jhopri (JJ) Clusters and distributed ownership certificates to 65,000 families living in the city's slum areas. "If development is going to be based on the nomenclature of a scheme, you deprive your own people..." Puri said.

The Delhi Government has created hurdles in every project, be it the construction of Metro Phase-IV or the Regional Rapid Transit System (RRTS), he alleged. Whenever there was talk on the construction of Metro Phase-IV, the AAP Government tried to create hurdles, he said.

"Out of 2,800 EWS houses under construction for JJ dwellers of Kathputli Colony, construction of about 500 houses is expected to be completed by March, 2020, which would be handed over to the eligible beneficiaries of Kathputli Colony. Another 1,675 houses in Jailorwala Bagh (Ashok Vihar) are also likelyto be completed by December, 2020 for allotment to the beneficiaries of JJ Dwellers of Jailorwala Bagh," the Ministry said.

As per the data, there are 685 JJ clusters surveyed by the Delhi Urban Shelter Improvement Board (DUSIB) and 85 inlisted clusters in Delhi. Puri alleged that since the PMAY (Urban) was launched in June 2015, not a single proposal has been received from

Who is Prashant Kishor? Puri asks on poll strategist being roped in by AAP

 \mathbf{D} ays after the poll strategist's political consultancy firm I-PAC was roped in by the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) ahead of the Delhi Assembly election, Union Housing and Urban Affairs Minister Hardeep Singh Puri on Friday said, "Who is Prashant Kishor?" Replying to a question at a Press conference, Puri who is also the coincharge of the BJP for the Delhi polls, said he did not know Kishor personally.

"Who is Prashant Kishor?," he asked, when a question was put to him about I-PAC being roped in by the Arvind Kejriwal-led AAP ahead of the Delhi polls, slated to be held early next year.

When reporters told the Minister that Kishor was a part of Prime Minister Narendra Modi's campaign in the 2014 Lok Sabha polls, he said, "I was not there during that time." "May be I should know, but I do not know him (Kishor)," Puri said on being told by reporters that he was also part of the BJP-led National Democratic Alliance (NDA) — the national vicepresident of the Janata Dal

Forces secular, respect rights laws: Gen Rawat

Army Chief Bipin Rawat addresses interns and senior officers of the National Human Rights Commission (NHRC) on the topic of Preserving Human Rights in Times of War and Prisoners of War at the Manay Adhikar Bhawan in New Delhi on Friday PTI

PNS NEW DELHI

Army Chief General Bipin Rawat said here on Friday the Indian armed forces have utmost respect for human rights laws and are extremely secular and their driving ethos are "Insaniyat" (Humanity) and "Sharafat" (Decency).

Making these observations while addressing the officers of the National Human Rights Commission(NHRC) on the topic "Preserving Human Rights in times of War and Prisioners of War," he also said the armed forces are disciplined and not only ensure protection of human rights of our own people but also of adversaries and deal with the prisoners of war as per the Geneva Conventions.

Rawat had on Thursday found himself in the thick of a controversy after his remark on the arson and violence against the Citizenship Amendment Act (CAA) invited criticism from political parties.

While stressing that the armed forces follow 'Insaniyat"(Humanity) and "Sharafat"(Decency), he, however said the challenge is the changing war fare tactics with the advent of technology. Unlike the attack by any armed forces, the terror attacks remain unaccountable in international law. Hence, the counter terrorism and anti insurgency operations have to be dealt in a manner of winning the hearts of the people by identifying and alienating the insurgents among them without collateral damage, which becomes very challenging and difficult.

General Rawat said that the Army Head Quarters had created a human rights cell in 1993, which now is being upgraded to the level of a Directorate to be headed by an Additional Director General. This will also have police personnel to address the complaints of human rights violations against the armed forces and facilitate related enquiries.

Moreover, a new initiative has been taken in October this year by recruiting women Jawans in Military Police Force. He said that the Army takes along with it several police personnel in search operations, but keeping in view the concerns of women during such operations, the army has now decided to deploy its lady Jawans of its Military Police Force also.

Rawat said keeping in view the provisions of human rights law and importance of the protection of human rights, now a court of enquiry is being held after every anti- insurgency operation and all records are maintained related to such

Referring to the Armed Force Special Powers Act (AFSPA), the Army Chief said that the Act gives almost the same powers to the Army, which are also exercised by Police and CRPF in connection with search and enquiry operations.

However, over the years the army itself has diluted its application in its own way under the ten commandments issued by the Chief of Army Staff, which are to be strictly adhered by every soldier, and particularly those deployed for operations in anti- insurgency areas.

The Supreme Court guidelines on this are also being strictly followed by soldiers, who are all given special training before their deployment in counter insurgency and counter terrorism operations.

Earlier, NHRC Member Justice PC Pant gave an insight into various laws protecting human rights. He also mentioned about some of the fundamental rights, which are not given to the armed forces in line of their duty.

Kolkata ex-cp Rajeev Kumar gets 'IAS' posting

Kolkata: The Bengal Opposition parties have questioned the "hidden agenda" behind the Mamata Banerjee Government's decision to reward senior IPS officer and former Kolkata Police Commissioner Rajeev Kumar — with alleged role in tampering of evidence in Saradha chit fund case — with a posting meant for the IAS officers.

Kumar a highly qualified IITian (in computer technology) vides a late evening Government notification on Thursday was transferred from the post of Additional Director General of Police to Principal Secretary, Information Technology.

"It is unprecedented that a tainted officer who is facing CBI investigation gets a reward posting and elevation from IPS to IAS cadre. This is only possible in the regime of Mamata Banerjee," said senior CPI(M) leader Sujan Chakrabarty wondering why the BJP was silent about that posting.

Kumar's case is pending in the Supreme Court where the CBI has appealed for a permission to arrest him after getting an adverse order in Calcutta High Court which restricted the top cop's movements between his office and residence.

Kumar was allegedly underground for about a month in October with the CBI hot in his trail – a development that the opposition dismissed as a hand-in-glove tactic of the BJP and TMC Governments.

The senior officer who is currently on leave and is reportedly out of country apparently pursuing his post doctoral degree in mathematics is wanted by the CBI for his alleged complacency in the multicrore chit fund case in which a number of vital evidences — like pen drives, dairies of the main accused Sudipto Sen, lap tops etc — were reportedly seized but not

NPR is NRC in disguise, alleges Congress leader Ajay Maken

PTI PATNA

The Congress on Friday charged the Narendra Modi Government at the Centre with working on the National Register for Citizens of National Population Register, which received the Cabinet nod earlier this week.

AICC spokesman Ajay Maken, who was speaking to newsmen, sought to buttress the point by citing that the NPR forms are seeking informations like mobile numbers of all family members and driving license details which had not been sought when the NPR was last conducted in the 2010-11 by the UPA Government in which he was the minister of state for home.

Maken also rejected the Governments contention that these details were to be shared rily. The NPR forms have an ambiguous 'if available' clause. Anybody who does not share these details would run the risk of his citizenship being deemed doubtful," he told a press conference here.

Asserting that the NRC has always been on the BJPs agenda, Maken pointed out that way back in 2003 when the NDA was in power it had brought out an amendment in the Citizenship Act seeking to make registration of every citizen compulsory. When we (Congress) came to power in 2004, there was a pilot project being carried out population of 3.1 million. Hindu Front, an umbrella organisation featuring Sangh Parivar constituents had threatened on Friday morning that it would stage a black flag demonstration against the Minister as well as the university on Saturday.

Later, following assurances from the State BJP head quarters that the Minister had cancelled his trip to Chennai, the Hindu

Front leaders called of the proposed black flag demonstration.

Vairamuthu was in the news last year as many female film artistes came out in the open as part of the "Me Too" campaign against him for his overtures and attempts to sexually abuse them offering them chances in films. Though Vairamuthu had denied any such happenings, the number of allegations by artistes increased which put the national award winning song writer in an embarrassing situation. The nation had honoured the writer with Padma Bhushan in 2014 for his distinguished services in "Literature and Education".

Scathing attack came from leading playback singer Chinmoyi Sripada of Tamil film industry who was the first victim to come out in

Mandala puja held at Sabarimala temple

PTI SABARIMALA

Thousands of devotees thronged the Lord Ayyappa temple here on Friday for the mandala puja which marked the culmination of the 41-day annual pilgrim season that was peaceful unlike protests over women's entry last year.

"swamiye Chanting saranam" Ayyappa devotees thronged the hill-top temple and waited patiently to witness the special pujas and rituals including "kalabha abhishekam" and "kalasa abhishekam". The 'mandala puja' was held under the aegis of the head priest Kandaru Mahesh . Mohanararu and Melshanti (Chief Priest) A Sudheer Namboothiri as pilgrims chanted hymns of the Lord in uni-The idol of the Lord Ayyappa was adorned with 'thanka angi," the sacred golden attire, which was brought here on Thursday evening in a ceremonial procession from the Sree Parthasarthy temple at Aranmula. Last year, the shrine had witnessed frenzied protests by devotees over the entry of Government decided to implement the September 28 verdict of the Supreme Court allowing women of all age groups to offer prayers.

However, with petitions against the September 28 verdict being referred to a larger bench by the apex court, the State Government decided to exercise caution and held that women in the 10-50 age group who wish to visit the hill temple should get a "court order" and it would not encourage activism.

Mahadayi river dispute: Goa Shiv Sena chief praises Guv for support letter on December 24 to the Panaji: Goa Shiv Sena chief Jitesh Kamat on Friday expressed gratitude to Governor Satya Pal Malik for being sensitive towards Goans on the Mahadayi water diversion issue.

This is after Malik told local cable channel 'Prudent Media' that he was with the people of Goa in their fight for Mahadayi, and attacked the Centre on the river dispute.

Goa and Karnataka are locked in a battle on Mahadayi river water sharing and the former has opposed the Centre's neighbouring state informing that environment clearance was not needed for the Kalsa Bhanduri project on the river

The governor has been here only for two months but is sensitive to the sentiments of Goans unlike others who claim to represent people of the state, Kamat said in a statement.

He also attacked Chief Minister Pramod Sawant on the issue and said the latter was criticising Goan agitators rather than standing with them. PTI

Time for change

With no milestone achievements in ensuring gender parity, a radical shift in attitudes is needed

community. While there were a few wins, there was hardly any forward movement towards parity because of the propensity of our policymakers to take one step forward and two steps back. But for judicial intervention, there is hardly any significant momentum for women in the country and the LGBTQ community. Both stand discriminated against and are on the fringes of society. The year saw the undoing of some major advances in LGBTQ rights, which took place in the last decade. In a major step towards gender equality, in 2014, the Supreme Court had recognised transgender people as a third gender and upheld their fundamental rights as guaranteed under the Constitution. It also gave them the right to self-identification of their gender as male, female or third-gender. In another landmark judgment in 2018, the top court decriminalised same-sex consensual relationships. Put together, both verdicts laid the foundations for expanding the citizenship rights of the LGBTQ community. However, this year, legislative reforms failed to keep pace with the path shown by the apex court. Though the passage of the Transgender Persons (Protection of Rights) Act, 2019, has been a big step forward, it remains ambiguous on many counts. For instance, while the Act gives every transgender person the right to self-perceived identity, it stipulates a lengthy bureaucratic process for the issuance of a certificate of identity that, too, through a District Magistrate. To be identified as a male or female, one will have to go through a hugely-expensive and painful surgery and then get the certificate revised. This, instead of providing the community with protection, leaves it at the mercy of corrupt, biased and insensitive doctors and District Magistrates. It is also unclear whether applying for such a certificate of identity is a must and will those, who already possess identity documents, have to apply for the certificate again? Also, the Act does not put in place any "clear" procedures in case of denial of the certificate, leaving the door open for costly and time-consuming litigations. Most people from the community can ill-afford this because our society, with its inherent biases, has denied them the dignity and opportunity of education and jobs. Without these two essential tools that will equip them for an economically independent life, there is hardly any hope for their emancipation and uplift. The Act also keeps mum on the vital issue of reservation in jobs and discrimination in the workplace and right of parenthood. The glaring deficiencies make the legislation counterproductive, unresponsive and incapable of meeting the needs of the marginalised community.

While economic opportunities for women are extremely limited at 35.4 per cent, with just 13.8 per cent being able to break the corporate glass ceiling and make their place on company boards, the pay packet taken home by them is just one-fifth of that of a man in a similar position. Economic independence for women is an ongoing battle as only one-quarter of women, compared with 82 per cent of men, engage actively in the labour market and constitute merely 30 per cent of professional and technical workers. Despite the Modi Government's Beti Bachao, Beti Padhao initiative, only two-thirds of women are literate as compared to 82 per cent men. Discrimination against the girl child begins from the womb itself as is evident by the dismal sex ratio with just 91 girls being born for every 100 male child. Access to nutrition and healthcare has also not been spared from the age-old biases. Men get a better deal in a country that believes in the concept of shakti and worships goddesses and puts Mother India on a pedestal. Ironically, in a country that was run by a woman for 20 years, today, political empowerment of women remains low with just 14.4 per cent representation in Parliament. In fact, the Women's Reservation Bill, that seeks to reserve 33.33 per cent seats in the Lok Sabha and State Assemblies for women, is one of the country's longest pending legislations. As a nation we also failed to learn our lessons from the 2012 Nirbhaya gangrape case. The ₹2,264-crore Nirbhaya Fund remains grossly underused at a dismal 11 per cent (₹252 crore). Poor spending of the fund reveals the lack of political will and the cavalier attitude of the men in power. Calls for criminalisation of marital rape also remained unheard in a male-dominated society. However, in a small step in the right direction, the Supreme Court in a recent judgment criminalised non-consensual sex with a wife between 15-18 years of age. One major achievement of the Modi Government in 2019 was the coming into effect of a new law, the Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Marriage) Act, 2019, which criminalised triple talag. But much more needs to be done to ensure gender equality. Let's hope for a better year ahead.

Unfair selection

Former Indian star spinner Harbhajan Singh has stirred a hornet's nest by questioning team India selectors hen it comes to turban-wearing superstar spinners who played for India's cricket team making a fuss about the selection process, one usually thinks of former India captain and current bête noire of the Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI). Bishan Singh Bedi. So when one heard that it is the more contemporary Harbhajan Singh, who has raised his voice, questioning the Indian selectors, it came as a surprise. While Harbhajan Singh has never been shy of drawing attention to himself, his altercation with Andrew Symonds during a Test match against Australia and with pacer S Sreesanth during an IPL match are notorious. But he has usually been supportive of the cricket establishment. His attack on the selectors came on behalf of Hyderabad batsman Suryakumar Yadav, who, as Harbhajan acknowledges, is having a great season with his State team and for the Indian developmental sides India A and India B. The spinner, whose post-cricket career as a commentator is not taking flight, asked why Yadav was ignored while a rather nebulous "others" are being given chance after chance.

Is there favoritism among the cricket selectors? This is rather an obvious question. Selectors have always tended to favour players whom they have known for years. The fact is that such favoritism has always existed and until the selection process is made transparent, nothing much will change. Very often with sportspersons, the rigours of the top level of the game are actually different from lower tiers. Many of the best domestic players in cricket have not made the transition to the international game. A lot depends on the mental state. Selectors need to have a "feel" for a player and often give chance to a player, who they believe, has a higher chance of success in the long run, a longer run at the game. They did just that with Virat Kohli almost a decade ago and one doubts any Indian cricket fan questions that decision today. Things will always seem unfair towards one player or another but as long as the Indian team keeps succeeding, questioning the selectors ought to be frowned upon. They will make mistakes now and again but on the whole, their overall success is what should be measured.

Halted at Madrid

COP25 once again highlights the dark future of the green planet. Given the attitudes of the Trump administration and Jair Bolsonaro, no significant progress is likely in the near future he outcome of the United Nations' Climate Change Conference, also known as COP 25 (25th United Nations Climate Change Conference), held in Madrid from December 2 to 13, has disappointed many. It produced a bland, platitudinous statement re-emphasising with 'serious concern the urgent need to address the significant gap between the aggregate effect of Parties' mitigation efforts in terms of global annual emissions of greenhouse gases by 2020." It simultaneously added that it "stresses the urgency of enhanced ambition in order to ensure the highest possible mitigation and adaptation efforts by all Parties."

COP 25's failures were primarily in two areas. One was its inability to frame rules governing the operations of carbon trading, which owes its origin to the Kyoto Protocol of 1997. Deferred to this year by the last year's conference, COP 24, it has been shelved for the next climate conference, COP 26, to be held in Glasgow in December next year. The second was its failure to make any progress towards achieving meaningful emission cuts.

One must first look at the carbon trading since deliberations over it were supposed to be a principal feature of the conference even before the latter began. It owes its origin to the Kyoto Protocol, which came into force in 2005. Dividing countries into developed and developing ones, and recognising that the former were responsible for the current level of greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions through more than 150 years of industrial activity, it mandated that the 37 industrialised nations plus the European Union cut their emission levels to targets for GHG emissions for the first compliance period from 2008 to 2012. Developing countries, numbering 100, and including India and China, were asked to contribute by investing in projects designed to lower emissions in their countries.

Developed, industrialised countries undertook to reduce their annual hydrocarbon emissions by an average of 5.2 per cent, representing 29 per cent of the world's GHG emissions, by 2012. All countries were required to draw up national emission reduction targets, called Nationally Determined Contributions (NDCs), which they had to submit regularly to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFC-CC). The protocol laid down that instead of reducing its own emissions, a polluting credits from another that had reduced its carbon footprint. Industrialised countries could do so through the Emission Reduction Purchase Agreement, while a Clean Development Mechanism gave developing countries carbon credits in the form of Certified Emission Reduction Units, which were bought and sold in a separate market. Equally, instead of reducing emissions domestically, an industrialised country or a company could offset its high levels of GHG emissions by investing in green ventures through what the Protocol identified as Joint Implementation (JI) projects and, thereby, earn Emission Reduction Units from the

The question arises: What is a carbon credit? It is a permit or a certificate, issued by a Government or a regulatory body, allowing a country or an organisation to burn a certain specified amount of hydrocarbon fuel over a specified period. Each carbon credit is valued against one tonne of hydrocarbon fuel.

As the commitment period of the Kyoto Protocol ended in December 2012, parties to it met in Doha, Qatar, and amended it, fixing new emission reduction targets for the period 2013 to 2020. The Doha Amendment, as it was called, and was superseded by the Paris Climate Agreement of 2015. Article 6 of the Paris Climate Agreement provides for international cooperation and carbon trading.

carbon trading has been clouded by allegations of corruption and the fundamental claim that it does not really help in reducing emission levels. Particularly under focus have been Joint Implementation Projects. The rules provide that an industrialised country must invest in a project, which would not otherwise have come about and not in ones that were to happen anyway. The allegation is that the latter has been the case in an alarming number of instances.

As early as August 24, 2015, a report in The Guardian by Arthur Neslen referred to the findings of the Stockholm Environment Institute that the Joint Implementation scheme was so open to abuse that three quarters of the allowances under it lacked environmental integrity. As a result, around 600m tonnes of carbon were wrongly emitted under the UNFCCC-administered Joint Implementation (JI) scheme. The institute's paper, which was corroborated by United which were published in Nature Climate Change, states that an estimated 80 per cent of JI projects were of low environmental quality. The Guardian dispatch quotes one of the authors Unfortunately, the issue of of the report, Vladyslav Zhezherin, as saying, "Many of them didn't observe the requirements of JI on 'additionality' as they would probably have happened anyway, and I would even doubt the physical existence of some of these projects." He was further quoted to have added, "I would say that many of them were fake. According to The Guardian report, Russia and Ukraine were the two biggest beneficiaries of the JI system. Not surprisingly, JI markets in the two countries have received particular attention. The Guardian report quotes a source with regulatory experience in Ukraine's JI market as saying that as the 2000s dragged on, JIs increasingly came to be seen by market participants as "a corruption mechanism.

Clearly, the rules and regulations for carbon trading need to be reformed substantially to rule out corruption and ensure transparency in transactions. Matters have been further complicated by the issue of before the Paris Climate Conference can be used in the period after it came into force. Not surprisingly, the rules continue to be subjects of discussion and, judging by the progress thus far and the interests involved, are unlikely to be finalised in COP 26. Even if these are, the wider question of whether the carbon trading system actually helps in reducing emission levels remains, with the critics pointing out that it primarily helps the developing countries to maintain their high emission levels without making any significant contribution to reducing — or even containing — emission levels in the developing countries.

This once again under lines the fact that global warming can only be mitigated by implementing the Paris Climate Agreement's goal of keeping the global tempera-ture rise this century to well below $2^{O}C$ above pre-industrial levels and to pursue efforts to limit the temperature increase even further to 1.5°C. It is also important to achieve the Agreement's goal of enhancing the ability of countries to deal with impacts climate change. Unfortunately, no progress was made in these directions tudes of the Trump administration and leaders like Jair Bolsonaro, the President of Brazil, no significant progress is likely in the near future.

LETTERS THE EDITOR

Change is coming, slowly

Defusing tensions

Sir — This refers to the editorial, "Row over NPR" (December 27). The faux pas on the Assam National Register of Citizens (NRC) had the Government err in haste over its subsequent and contradictory narrative on the National Population Register (NPR)-NRC. It must be said that the Government counted on this miasma to look for electoral leverage in the upcoming Assembly elections.

Assam, however, has long been vehement over the primacy of the Assamese ethos in any political prescription. The net result is a nationwide reaction, with each section interpreting the same page to its own understanding. The feverish attempts at translation by every stake-holder can be toned down, if not be subdued, only when the Supreme Court gives its ruling on the Citizenship Amendment Act (CAA). We have seen how a simple referendum over Brexit has tied up a nation with four centuries of vintage democracy in knots for three long years.

he humiliating defeat of the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) in Jharkhand isn't surprising. The Prime Minister had held around 10 election campaigns in the State and Union Home Minister and BJP president Amit Shah had addressed the people on at least seven occasions. All the rhetoric concerning the abrogation of the special status of Jammu & Kashmir, the construction of the Ram temple, the criminalisation of instant triple talaq and the implementation of the Citizenship (Amendment) Act was rejected by the people of the State It is clear that these issues cannot overrule the local ones when it comes to the State polls. The results show yet again that the image of Narendra Modi as a BJP mascot has its limitations in spite of his popularity.

The main reason for the BJP's recent defeats in several States seems to be the party's growing arrogance following its massive victory in the general elections. With the loss of Jharkhand, the BJP now governs only 35 per cent of India's landmass, whereas in 2017, its dominion extended to 71 per cent. It is time for the party to introspect. Instead of trying to belittle the Congress and Jawaharlal Nehru or Pakistan all the time, the BJP should focus on delivering on its promises such as the creation of jobs and detecting black money. It is ironic that it was the BJP, which introduced the dubious system of electoral bonds instead of wiping out corruption. It has failed at stopping poverty-stricken farmers from committing suicide. Moreover, the state of the economy is growing worse. The fact that the tribal voters have turned against the party in significant numbers is also telling. It is an opportune moment for the Opposition to unite against the Modi-Shah regime and form a people-friendly, corruption-free Government.

Sir — It is really disquieting that the Indian Government has shut down the internet in various parts of the country in order to quell the protests against the Citizenship Amendment Act (CAA), with Uttar Pradesh topping the list.

This situation is eerily reminiscent of the blackouts carried out by the Chinese Government

Dhoni's comeback

Sir — It is heart-warming to know that former Indian cricket team skipper Mahendra Singh Dhoni has accomplished his glorious 15 years in international cricket. With an unconventional batting technique, newfangled wicket-keeping expertise and fearless captaincy, Dhoni changed the face of Indian cricket and took the team to new heights in the international arena. He also became a role model for countless youngsters across the nation.

Dhoni has always been a strong pillar of the Indian cricket team. Despite being a small town boy, he made it evident that nothing can restrain an individual from achieving greatness in life if one has a genuine passion and a strong will to do so. Since he has not played for team India for the past six months, one hopes that he makes a sturdy comeback soon in international cricket.

Unlock the power of partnerships

It's time like-minded organisations come together to forge collaborations that can catalyse public health and expedite healthcare transformation, say SITA R BUDARAJU and RAJNI WADHWA

The vision of a sustainable and equitable world hinges on robust human capital. Knowledge, skills and health, which enable people to realise their full potential as productive members of society, are collectively termed as "human capital." When nations invest in areas, including health, nutrition and education, they build a wealth of human capital. A study by the Institute for Health Metrics and Evaluation found that nations with greater improvements in human capital tend to have faster growth in per capita GDP. Health is an important barometer as well as means for human capital. While India has made significant improvements in health over the last decade, there are areas that still need targetted interventions. For instance, neonatal health. India loses about 7.47 lakh newborns every year. There is also a stark interstate variation in neonatal health. While Kerala has achieved single-digit neonatal mortality rate (NMR) of five deaths per 1,000 live births, there are States, which still lose over 30 newborns for every 1,000 live births.

Although India has made strides in improving maternal mortality ratio (MMR) — from 556 per 100,000 live births in 1990 to 130 in 2014-16 — there is still a long way to go to combat the wide interstate variation. While Kerala, Maharashtra and Tamil Nadu have already achieved the target of less than 70 deaths per 1,00,000 live births (as envisaged under the third SDG), some States need intensive efforts to reach the SDG target.

MMR is one among a total of 17 SDGs adopted by the United Nations to transform society. A baseline report and SDG index launched by the UN System in India and the Government gave the country an overall score of 58, while noting that there are wide variations between the States. The value of the score indicates the average performance of the State/UT towards achieving the 13 SDGs and their respective targets. To put it in perspective, Himachal Pradesh and Kerala lead the index, with a score of 69, followed by Tamil Nadu at 66 and Andhra Pradesh, Goa, Gujarat, Karnataka and Maharashtra, all with a score of 64. With a little over a decade to go to meet the 2030 deadline, goals are still achievable if there is wholehearted commitment and effort. It has to be a shared responsibility, a tri-sector collaboration between the Government, the private sector and civil societies/non-profit organisations because the SDGs are common goals for all. Synergistic partnerships will prove to be the key driver or catalyst to drive transformation and help us reach those goals Recent history witnessed some powerful examples of successful collaborations between Government and development partners. The National Polio Surveillance Programme (NPSP), Zila Swachh Bharat and Swasth Bharat Prerak programmes, Karnataka Integrated Tele-medicine and Tele-health Project, Urban Slum Health Care Project in Andhra Pradesh and Mission Indradhanush are good examples of how multi-sectoral commitment and collaboration can lead to a significant impact from the ground up. We have many lessons to learn and findings to implement from these past experiences.

Today, the private sector has increasingly become a valuable partner in addressing crucial healthcare and development issues. According to the India Philanthropy Report, 2019, by Bain and Company and Dasra, private Indian philanthropy grew at 15 per cent per year between 2014 and 2018 and even outpaced public funding growth. Also, the CSR budget outlays of domestic corporations and contributions of corporate charitable trusts, combined, grew at 12 per cent during this period. While increased financial aid is a welcome sign, it is not enough. With their expertise, resources, reach and experience, the private and development sectors can accelerate the strengthening of India's health systems together. When philanthropies and corporates forge coalitions, their impact can be synergistic and exponential. Some examples of effective collaboration include ine india Health Fund, which is locussed on strengthening india s ability to fight and eliminate tuberculosis and malaria. Similarly, under the Healthy India Alliance, organisations working on NCD issues in India have come together to catalyse multi-sectoral action to enhance quality of life.

Despite these efforts, there is still a huge scope for alliances that focus on strengthening Government health systems. It is high time like-minded organisations came together to forge partnerships that catalyse public health. Such mergers can bring in the professionals, technology, expertise, capital and research prowess that can expedite health sector transformation. And this need not be restricted to Indian companies. Global firms, which have a huge market in India, too, need to participate in this process. The national development story will remain incomplete till we invest in building robust human capital, strengthen health systems and delivery at the last mile.

The dawn of a new era

Slowly but surely, India has manoeuvred its way through digital transformation. It must build on this success and the communication revolution to a new level for the creation of a vibrant economy

aving missed the first and second industrial revolution of the 19th and early 20th century (courtesy the subjugation of India to colonial rulers of those times) and even the third technology-driven revolution (this one was primarily due to the "protectionist" and "inward-looking" Government policies, which were not conducive to embracing technology), India is at the forefront of leading the fourth industrial revolution — a digitally driven one —with speed and scale.

The digital revolution calls for a shift from

The digital revolution calls for a shift from mechanical and analogue electronic technology to digital electronics, which began in the late 50s and the late 1970s with the adoption and proliferation of digital computers and digital record-keeping, which continues till the present day. The last five years have seen massive proliferation of affordable mobile phones, increase in the penetration of the internet and the explosion of data use from a mere 0.2 GB a month to 11 GB. This was possible due to the mammoth investment in telecom infrastructure, exponential growth of mobile factories within the country, expansion of telecom services (with prime focus on data services) and the adoption of new technologies, which are many times more efficient and cost effective. This was in turn spurred by an enabling policy environment that included "change horses in midstream." For instance, under the New Telecom Policy (NTP), 1999, service providers were allowed to switch over to the payment of license fee as a percentage of their annual revenue.

Digital infrastructure now forms the bedrock of unprecedented growth of start-ups in sunrise industries viz, online retail commerce, retail brokering, food delivery, ride-hailing, digital aggregation of service providers such as plumbers, cleaners and painters among others. Consequently, India has now emerged as the third largest start-up ecosystems in the world, right behind China and the US. It offers huge scope for generating employment and income. The success of the Modi Government's "financial inclusion" programme is predicated on the use of the Jan Dhan-Aadhaar-mobile phone (JAM) trinity. This platform is used for direct transfer of subsidy and other benefits to the beneficiary's account. This scheme has helped save thousands of crores of rupees by plugging leakages. This, however, would not have been possible in the absence of a robust digital architecture.

The Government has made effective use of technology to empower the farmers by distributing digitally-enabled 140 million soil health cards, which have all the information about the nutrient status of the soil and provides information on what fertilisers and other inputs are needed to improve soil health and its fertility. The Government also launched the National Agriculture Market (NAM), a pan-India electronic trading portal, for farm produce for the creation of a unified national market for agricultural commodities. Payments of wages under MGNREGS (Mahatma Gandhi Rural Employment Guarantee Scheme) are also being done through the Aadhaar Payments Bridge (APB) using the Direct Benefit Transfer (DBT) model.

The digital architecture has also helped millions of consumers and traders in facilitating ease of payments and business. The Government has also given a boost to indigenous digital payment mechanism. The Bharat Interface for Money-with the consumers.

True, India has seized the opportunity and taken the lead in the digital revolution. However, given the huge size of the nation, vastness in terms of both demography and geography, there are millions of people, who still remain unconnected and those connected are faced with quality issues. This makes it clear that there are massive challenges when it comes to enacting the kind of changes that are necessary in order to make a digital leap to the fourth industrial revolution. All stakeholders, including the Government and service providers, must be prepared to address the loopholes.

First, economic growth, which slowed down to five per cent and 4.5 per cent during the first and second quarter of the year, needs to be revived and accelerated to eight per cent in order to fulfil the dream of a $5 trillion economy by 2025. A "robust" and "healthy" digital infrastructure will be very crucial to achieve this target. It is equally important to realise the vital goal of doubling farmers income.

Second, substantial augmentation of the existing infrastructure will be necessary for the Modi Government to achieve its ambitious financial inclusion programme and at the same time ensuring effective implementation of welfare schemes. For instance, under the Pradhan Mantri Kisan Samman Nidhi (PM-KISAN), which promises to enroll 140 million marginal farmers within its fold, only 70 million have been enrolled so far. The Government has not even reached the half-way mark yet.

The proposal to pay fertiliser subsidy through the DBT system requires monumental efforts in terms of collecting farmers' data viz, land size, crop grown, soil status and fertiliser use. All of these need to be put on digital record. There is also a need to create a technology-driven financial architecture for has-sle-free transfer of money into the beneficiary's account. Unfortunately, the exercise has not even begun.

Third, India needs at least three to four telecom service providers so as to maintain delivery of "quality" services at "affordable" price (considering the growing needs, we should be aiming at six). Unfortunately, today, the telecom industry is at the brink. One major player, Vodafone-Idea, has already hinted at closing the shop if the Government does not provide relief. There is an urgent need to pull it back.

The service providers themselves need to do a lot. They began well by pledging to avoid predatory tariff cuts. This should be sustained (the regulator will have to play a role expected from it; it has not done so far). The Government may provide some relief by way of a cut in Spectrum Usage Charge (SUC) from existing eight per cent to say five per cent and a reduction in Goods and Services Tax (GST) as well. However, it must not go for a complete bailout as that could destabilise its budget.

Fourth, while implementing revival plans for BSNL and MTNL, efforts must be made to ensure that they remain self-financed and the impact on the budget must remain minimal. This can be done only if the sale plan of their land and other assets is vigorously carried forward. Apart from reaching out to remote areas, where private firms may not go, their continuation is necessary from "security" and "strategic" perspective.

Fifth, the Government must come out with a comprehensive policy on "subsidising" digital services under its welfare schemes to empower farmers, self-help groups (SHGs) and village panchayats among others. Money should come from the State or Central budget and, thus, ensure that the service providers, including BSNL, are not made to foot the bill.

Sixth, in the process of conducting businesses, digital companies generate data on millions of customers. This has raised three major concerns viz, protection of data; rights of citizens to privacy; and national security. Considering that the e-commerce landscape is dominated by multinationals such as Amazon and Walmart, concerns are heightened due to cross-border movement and sharing of "sensitive" data with third parties, including foreign Governments.

The Government has adopted a multi-pronged way to address these concerns, which includes the issuance of executive orders (for example, last year, the Reserve Bank of India ordered all payment companies to transfer data to India within six months); enactment of a law on data protection; the roll out of a policy on FDI in e-commerce market place and regulaplatforms. However, care must be taken to ensure that our digital initiatives and innovation, especially, the start-up ecosystem, are not haemorrhaged. We also need to remember that if India goes too far in insisting on "data localisation", "setting up local office" and the "handing over the data key to regulators", then this can trigger retaliation from the US, the EU countries and others, thus affecting billions of dollar exports from Indian IT and ITenabled service companies.

Finally, India needs to carefully develop its approach to taxation of digital transactions (and how the Government can make OECD agree to our ideas on the subject) as in the years to come, this will be a major source of revenue.

Harness AI power to transform healthcare

To address the twin problems of diagnosing cancer early and to treat it at a fraction of the cost, the field of Artificial Intelligence must be explored

VIVEK ELURI

n 1910, the then US President, William Howard Taft, had claimed that "within five Lyears, cancer will have been removed from the list of fatal maladies." More than a century later, we are yet to understand the intricacies of the disease. Cancer refers to a class of disease where previously healthy cells multiply abnormally and spread or "metastasise" to other parts of the body. When this growth impairs the normal functions of organs or systems, it can lead to death. Cancer is not a single disease but a grouping of hundreds of diseases, which share common features. This means that any cure must be specific to the particular sub-class to be effective. This, along with the fact that curing cancer ultimately means removal of unwanted growths of parts of our own body, make it incredibly hard to treat.

Cancer is of particular concern for India. There has been a tectonic shift in the borne diseases, such as that of Malaria, have steadily decreased over the last three decades but the incidence of lifestyle diseases, categorised as non-communicable diseases or NCDs, such as diabetes and hypertension, has increased manifold in the same period. Increasingly, cancer's share in NCDs has increased in the past few years. The age-standardised rate of cancer is estimated to be 97 per 100,000 people. Treatments are prohibitively expensive and out-of-pocket expenditure is highest among any ailment, with about 40 per cent of cancer cases being financed through borrowings, sale of assets and contributions from family. In 2014, the ratio of the number of oncol-

In 2014, the ratio of the number of oncologists to the number of cancer patients stood at 1:2000, a far cry from the 1:100 ratio of high income nations such as the US. With 11.5 lakh new cancer patients being registered every year in the country, the healthcare system is reeling under overburdened workforce and inadequate infrastructure. In 2018 alone, 7.8 lakh people succumbed to the disease. Cancer takes time to present itself, which means it is usually diagnosed at an advanced stage. This inevitably means that the disease is tougher and more expensive to treat. Early diagnosis, coupled with prompt treatment, especially in the case of common cancers such as breast, cervical and colorectal cancers, per-disease burden faced by the country. Vectorborne diseases, such as that of Malaria, have steadily decreased over the last three decades but the incidence of lifestyle diseases, categorised as non-communicable diseases or NCDs, such as diabetes and hypertension, has increased manifold in the same period.

haps is the only way forward in ensuring survivability. But diagnostic services for cancer are scant, the procedures tend to be expensive and invasive. The problem India faces is two-fold: We need to diagnose cancer earlier and do it at a fraction of the cost. Artificial Intelligence (AI) may just be the answer.

Field image recognition, a sub-part of AI, has the ability to read and point anomalies. Many companies have come forward and developed AI-enabled radiology tools that predict cancer at an early stage. Existence of a high number of digitised images in radiology makes it a ripe field for AI exploration. Emergence of algorithms with the capability of analysing digital images to individual pixel level has opened the possibility of detecting features imperceptible to the human eyes.

MIT's AI lab and Massachusetts General Hospital (MGH) have created a new deeplearning model that can predict from a mammogram if a patient is likely to develop breast cancer as much as five years in the future. Identifying subtle markers in breast tissues that can act as precursors to malignant tumors, years in advance, is a breakthrough that supports physician's clinical decision. Niramai Health Analytix, a startup headquartered in Bengaluru, has developed an AI-led diagnostic platform that uses thermal image processing and ML algorithms for reliable and accurate breast cancer screening.

The tech community has recognised the impact that AI can have in healthcare with open source community and medical establishments actively building data-sets to spur innovation. Detection of lung nodules and their classification into benign and malignant growths using CT scans formed the problem statement of 2017 Kaggle Data Science Bowl, an international competition in the field of machine learning. Responses to this resulted in models with promising accuracy ranging from 85-90 per cent. Al can also successfully segment the lung tumors based on volumes and offer an insight into triaging cases for doctors and radiotherapy treatment planning. Whether these algorithms can be deployed on field, after refinement, is a question the medical community and the Government needs to answer.

AI may, perhaps, already be better than human doctors in a few, very specific tasks. Taking the conversation outside oncology, NTT Data, a Japanese technology firm, partnered with Deenanath Mangeshkar Hospital and Research Center in Pune to test the efficacy of its AI diagnosis support solution. The model was able to detect 56 emphysema cases, a lung condition that causes difficulty breathing, while normal diagnosis without AI detected 17 cases. These AI detected cases showed signs of mild or moderate levels of emphysema, which gave early findings to kickstart early treatment, thereafter enabling tracking of disease progression. In oncology as well, AI may be able to diagnose patients earlier and more accurately than doctors can, with the tools they currently have. Applications of AI in oncology go beyond image recognition as well.

With the healthcare industry increasingly adopting the practice of maintaining digitized health records, referred to as Electronic Health Records (EHR), AI is increasingly harnessing these digital records using natural language processing techniques to analyse data and predict the development of diseases. Marriage of EHR and AI find applications not only in disease prediction but also in disease monitoring, decision-making and drug recommendation. The use of EHR-enabled AI, to provide better services to the patients, is already underway in India.

As it stands, there is ample evidence to prove that AI will make diagnosis and treatment of cancer cheaper, more accurate and accessible to all. A few start-ups and health-care institutions are well underway at making this promise a reality. With advances in technological infrastructure and burgeoning research in AI, we can begin to expect path breaking changes in oncological care. But lack of clear regulations, quality data and a disparate public health system are impediments to large-scale deployment of these solutions.

Perhaps the biggest barrier to the injection of these solutions in public health systems lies in proving generalisability and on ground efficacy of these applications. Some AI algorithms make it impossible to re-trace the steps involved in the algorithm reaching a decision, a problem which is referred to as "black box problem." This problem might prevent us from weeding out biases and can result in unwitting and malicious problems. Biases may creep in through other mechanisms, such as training the AI model on nonrepresentative datasets. Regulations, which mandate and set parameters for datasets that AI algorithms are trained on, are required to prevent any such biases. An ecosystem that supports infusion of AI into regular practices needs to be developed as well. As it stands, public healthcare systems are fragmented and are not interoperable. While a few standards do exist, the healthcare industry is yet to adopt them in a holistic manner. Adoption of industry wide standards along with clear mechanisms and guidelines for use and certification of AI and AI-enabled medical devices will be necessary in order to make sure AI solutions for cancer become ubiquitous.

Forex reserves climb $456 mn to record $455 bn

Mumbai: The country's foreign exchange reserves increased by USD 456 million to a fresh lifetime high of USD 454.948 billion in the week to December 20, according to RBI data. In the previous week, the reserves had swelled by USD 1.070 billion to USD

In the reporting week, the rise in reserves was mainly on account of an increase in foreign currency assets, a major component of the overall reserves, which surged by USD 311 million to USD 422.732 billion, weekly data released by the Reserve

Expressed in dollar terms, the foreign currency assets include the effect of appreciation or depreciation of non-US units like the euro, pound and the yen held in the forex reserves. Focus more on mining sector to regain its 3% share in GDP: CII

s the country aims to Abecome a USD 5 trillion economy, the policy makers need to focus more on the mining sector with concerted efforts to regain its 3 per cent share in the GDP by 2024-25, says a study.

According to the study conducted by industry body CII, the mining industry's share in India's GDP (in real terms) in 2018-19 was a low of 2.6 per cent, down from 3 per cent in 2011-12.

The study 'Towards a Globally Competitive Minerals and Mining Industry' was released at the Mining Summit 2019 here.

"The minerals and mining industry is core to India's growth ambition of a USD 5 trillion economy. Exploration, extraction and management of minerals have to be guided by national goals and perspectives, to be integrated into the overall strategy of India's economic development. And at the same time, there should be efforts to promote domestic industry and reduce import dependency," Mines Joint Secretary Upendra Joshi said while releasing the report.

The sector has a pivotal role to play in the 'Make in India' vision of the prime minister and exploration can improve India's mineral security and competitive edge.

'There is a significant scope for new mining capacities in iron ore, bauxite and coal and considerable opportunities for future discoveries of subsurface deposits. The Geological Survey of India has almost doubled its exploration activity by implementing about 400 mineral exploration projects on various mineral commodities," he said.

Attractive provisions have been made for inviting private investment in mineral exploration through revenue sharing model. It shall also be ensured that the regulatory environment is conducive to ease of doing business with simpler, transparent and time-bound procedures for doing business, Joshi added

Vistara partners with Nelco for inflight data services

Launch expected shortly: Official

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

V istara has partnered with Tata group company Nelco for inflight data services, which are expected to be rolled by the full service carrier shortly, according to a senior government official.

Nearly five years after starting operations, Vistara — a joint venture between Tatas and Singapore Airlines — is also likely to be the first domestic carrier to provide inflight connectivity within India. Telecom Secretary Anshu Prakash said required spectrum had been allocated for the purpose.

"Vistara has tied up with Nelco and they have taken transponder space from ISRO (Indian Space Research Organisation)... they had come to us for spectrum allocation which we have done. And they will be launching these services very shortly," he said.

When contacted, a Vistara spokesperson said, "We have not finalised this yet," referring to launch of the services. An email sent to Nelco seeking comments did not elicit any immediate response and the company's spokespersons

While airlines can offer both voice and data connectivity under the 'Flight and Maritime Connectivity Rules-2018' notified by the government in December 2018, data connectivity is expected to be offered first, Prakash said.

"There can also be voice but voice is not happening right now. Still data is as good as voice, because once you have data you can use Over-The-Top (OTT) and make WhatsApp calls," he noted.

Regarding inflight wi-fi services, Prakash said the tariffs were not regulated by the government. "It is for them to decide what tariff they will charge. I suppose it will be an add-on service that the airlines will offer in relation to their competitors but whether they will charge or not charge, is their decision," the Telecom Secretary said. Telecom pricing is currently under forbearance, and "tariff is not an issue in this", he added. Vistara, in which Tata Sons has 51 per cent stake and the rest is with Singapore Airlines, began commercial services on January 9, 2015. With a fleet of 39 planes, the carrier operates more than 200 flights a day and is working on expanding its overseas presence.

January but did not divulge the airlines it would be partnering with for the offering. In March, the company obtained a licence from the Department of Telecommunications for providing In-Flight and Maritime Connectivity (IFMC) services.

"We are hoping to start inflight connectivity services around January timeframe. We will start with data services, Nelco Managing Director and CEO PJ Nath had said recently.

As per the terms and condition of the IFMC licence, the services would be activated once the aircraft attains a minimum height of 3,000 metres in Indian airspace to avoid interference with terrestrial mobile

The IFMC licence is granted against an annual fee of ₹1 for a period of 10 years and the permit holder has to pay licence fees and spectrum charges based on revenue earned from services. In September, Nelco launched its maritime communications services in the country, and said the offering would enable high-end support to those in sea by providing access to voice, data and video services while travelling on sailing vessels, cruise liners, ships in India, using satellite technology.

EU chief warns new Brexit delay might be necessary

he European Union (EU) The European Onion (_ and Britain will struggle to seal an agreement on trade and other aspects of their future ties after Brexit next year and should consider extending the negotiations beyond 2020, a top EU official said in an interview published on Friday.

The UK is scheduled to leave the EU on January 31. If it does, it will be the first time a country leaves the world's biggest trading bloc. Negotiations between the remaining members and the British Government on future trade, fisheries, education and transport relations can only begin after that date and must conclude by the end of 2020.

"I am very concerned about how little time we have," Commission European President Ursula von der Leyen told the French business newspaper Les Echos. "It seems to me that, on both sides, we should seriously consider whether the negotiations are feasible in such a short time."

"I think it would be reasonable to take stock in the middle of the year and if necessary, agree on an extension to the transition period," von der Leyen said. As the leader of the executive commission, von der Leyen heads the EU institution responsible for Brexit talks and negotiating trade deals on behalf of member countries.

Such trade pacts routinely take years to complete, and businesses fear that the UK could face a new "no-deal" Brexit scenario at the start of 2021 if questions about whether tariff-free trade with the country's biggest trading partner remain unanswered.

But British Prime Minister Boris Johnson has insisted he would not agree to any delays. Johnson who won a solid parliamentary majority in an election earlier this month, which helped him push a Brexit withdrawal deal through the lower house of Parliament, The Brexit bill contained amendments that bar the British government from extending the transition period beyond 2020.

Turkey court gives jail terms to opposition journalists

Istanbul: A Turkish court on Friday issued jail terms to six journalists from an opposition newspaper accused of links to the group blamed by the Government for the 2016 failed coup, a lawyer told AFP.

The court in Istanbul sentenced journalists from the Sozcu daily including columnist Emin Colasan and editorin-chief Metin Yilmaz to prison terms ranging from two years and one month to three years and six months on terrorism charges, their lawyer Celal Ulgen said.

The nationalist Sozcu is on occasion vehemently anti-government and its angry front pages are regarded with suspicion even by some liberal Turks critical of President Recep Tayyip Erdogan. It is the second opposition daily to be targeted after Cumhuriyet newspaper.

Colasan was quoted by the paper as telling the court. "There is no evidence or witness against us." Sozcu condemned the verdict as a "black stain", saying those convicted were only carrying out their work as journalists.

The court also sentenced the newspaper's accountant to two years and one month in prison. It said the case against its owner Burak Akbay, who is the subject of a 2017 arrest warrant but remains abroad, would be treated separately.

Lawyer Ülgen said a higher court was due to decide whether to uphold the sentences, adding that the journalists were currently free. 'There is neither a judicial control or any measure that restricts their freedom right now," he said.

Pakistan media: Musharraf challenges special court's verdict in high treason case

PTI ISLAMABAD

Pakistan's former military dictator Gen (retd) Pervez Musharraf on Friday filed a petition in a court against the special court's verdict convicting him of high treason and sentencing him to death, according to media reports.

Last week, the special court in Islamabad sentenced 76year-old Musharraf to death in absentia for high treason following a six-year legal case.

The 86 page-long petition, filed by Advocate Azhar Siddique in the Lahore High Court (LHC) on Friday on Musharraf's behalf, named the federal government and others as respondents, Dawn News

The petition highlighted that the "judgement contained a mix of anomalies and contradictory statements".

It added that the special court "rapidly and hurriedly wrapped up the trial which was far from conclusion", the report said.

The petition stated that the special court "has not taken into consideration that no actions detrimental to national interest were taken by the applicant" as "no offence of high treason is made out from the evidence presented against him (Musharraf) before the special court".

The full bench, chaired by Justice Mazahir Ali Akbar Naqvi, will hear the petition on January 9, 2020.

Russia says first Israel's Netanyahu hypersonic missiles sweeps party primary enter service in re-election boost

AFP ■ JERUSALEM

Embattled Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu told supporters on Friday he would win a March general election after scoring a landslide victory in the leadership primary of his right-wing Likud party.

Israel's longest-serving premier, who faces a corruption indictment as well as a third general election in 12 months, was expected to beat rival Gideon Saar in the leadership primary.

But the convincing margin of victory — by 72.5 to 27.5 percent — strengthens his position in the party he has dominated for 20 years. Netanyahu, 70, called it a "huge win" and pledged to emerge victorious in the March 2 general election. "Now is the time to unite and bring a tremendous victory for the Likud and the right in the election," Netanyahu told a press conference. "Most of the people support the right and support me to lead the Government."

ISIS claims execution of | UN: More than 235,000 flee 11 Christians in Nigeria

Kano: Jehadis aligned to the ISIS group have released a video claiming to show the execution of 11 Christians in restive northeast Nigeria.

The footage posted online late on Thursday by ISIS-linked propaganda arm Amaq showed 11 blindfolded men being shot and stabbed by jihadists from the Islamic State West African Province (ISWAP) at an undisclosed location.

"This is a message to Christians all over the world," said a masked man in the oneminute video.

He claimed the killings were in reprisal for the death of ISIS chief Abu Bakr al-

Baghdadi and his spokesman. ÍSIS leader Baghdadi committed suicide in October to avoid capture during a US special forces raid on his hideout in the province of Idlib in northwest Svria.

In recent months, ISWAP has intensified its attacks on Christians, security personnel and aid staff, setting up roadblocks on highways and conducting searches.

The United Nations on Tuesday condemned the "increasing practice by armed groups to set up checkpoints targeting civilians" in the northeast of Nigeria.

The missile does not violate the treaty. Putin unveiled the new weapon during his state of the nation address in 2018, saying it would defeat all existing missile defence systems.

He said at the time the missile was highly manoeuvrable and flew at 20 times the speed of sound.

Art curator and critic INA PURI hopes that art will go the egalitarian way in 2020 as more Indian artists and curators are expected to collaborate with prestigious galleries internationally and continue to host several interesting art events in the country

The actors were influencers on the art scene, from the capital, each one a prominent member of the Indian art fraternity. We had all gathered on a chilly December evening to play a part in an elaborate project conceptualised by the acclaimed young art practitioner, Vibha Galhotra, for her forthcoming exhibition in February 2020 at the prestigious Jack Shainman Gallery in New York.

If the present year was exceptional for Indian art and artists, 2020 promises even bigger things. Art collections will tend to acquire works from international auctions. Diverse media, mostly found objects (a naturor man-made object, or fragment of an object, that is found by an artist and kept because of some intrinsic interest the artist sees in it) will take up more space at exhibitions and galleries. Various art festivals and biennales will be offering more opportunities to artists from different worlds. I am especially excited to see Bapi Das showcasing alongside international artists at the Kochi-Muziris

However, having said that, one must not overlook the major art events of 2019 that brought Indian artists back

In my own case, I remember, it had been an exceptionally stormy day when I had visited the space at the Biennale, but to my pleasant surprise, it was crowded with art enthusiasts, both young and old, clearly enjoying the exhibition despite the terrible weather. It has been a

for Indian art in more ways than one. Earlier, the DAG had opened its beautifully appointed space in New York, showcasing the works of veteran artists Madhvi Parekh and Anupam Sud, among others. At the new Museum of Modern Art (MOMA), India was represented by the brilliant works of Mrinalini Mukherjee (who had just exhibited at the prestigious MET), Zarina Hashmi, Dayanita Singh and Sheila Gawda. Jayshree Chakravorty had opened to great acclaim at Museum D'Orsay and Ganesh Haloi had received similar glowing reviews in the shows across Europe with Akar Prakar.

The year ended on a great note with the Serendipity Arts Festival in Goa. I felt this year was especially exciting, given the participation of curators like Jyotindra Jain, Ravi Agarwal, Nancy Adajania, Rahab Allana, Pramod HG and Sudarshan Shetty, who were able to use the spaces given to them most effective-

As we step into the new year, we hear that DAG's Drishyakala is gearing up with new shows scheduled to open alongside the India Art Fair. Plans are afoot to open another museum space in Kolkata, in the heritage Currency Building. Against this background, there is a reason to be optimistic about the art scene in the coming year. While Amar Kanwar, K G Subramanyan, Nilima Sheikh and Nalini Malani have already shown at dOCUMENTA 13 and 14, we now have younger artists ready to participate. Among the shows lined up is one at the Nehru Centre curated by Bhavna Kakar, which will bring strong female voices from the chapters of history. Finally, of course, the most exciting art event of next year will be the new edition of the Kochi-Muziris Biennale, curated by Shubigi Rao, opening in December. So, all things considered, there is much to look forward to in the coming year. Not only will Indian artists and curators be collaborating with prestigious galleries internationally but within the country too there will be a host of interesting art events. While the current favourites are MF Husain, FN Souza, SH Raza, VS Gaitonde and Manjit Bawa but 2020 is expected to make more favourites. And while RAQS Media has been making an impact internationally, it will continue to do so in the coming year. Also, there is hope that art will go the egalitarian way at last.

STUDIO CHAT 20 MINUTES

How would you describe The Long Song?

It is an adaptation of an Andrea Levy book, which centres on the pre-abolition Jamaica, which was quite a rebellious island, having two or three rebellion movements every year during slavery. It was a very pugnacious island. Andre's book centres on a plantation called Amity, which is probably fictional, where the slaves are just catching on to the fact that there's freedom but in reality, there's just the whiff of it. Some of them are sceptical. My character, Godfrey, is the head of slaves. He is sceptical because they've had trouble before and nothing has come of it. But this time, it might come to fruition. And Caroline Mortimer (played by Hayley Atwell), the lady of the house, is slightly incognisant of the fact that change is coming. She has adopted a girl called July, whom she clings on to as she is the only one who can help her communicate with

Godfrey is very proud being the head of the slaves but then he sees that freedom is coming and he's on possibly the wrong side and he must

• What does this story mean to

My family is from Jamaica. Hence, I don't do 'who do you think you are' because all the two to three generations have been full of slavery. So it's in my family. I did a documentary called Caribbean Kid recently, and we went back to my grandmother's house, which was at a plantation island. We went inside her house at the back and there were all these slave graves — small ones for babies, big ones for adults. That's how slaves were buried — on the property. So when I read The Long Song, I felt that it's an alternate slave narrative in which Andrea is saying that at some point, slaves would have utilised humour to just get through the day. And I really believe that. It wouldn't have been weeps every day. There would have been some moments where there was laughter.

REAL TO REEL

LENNY HENRY, who plays Godfrey in The Long Song, says that it shows how slaves of Jamaica utilised humour just to get through the day, which is what gives the audience an alternate side of looking at slavery. By TEAM VIVA

So Andrea has drawn a razorthin line between the drama of it and where we are allowed to know that slaves had a sense of humour. In this drama, you'll see other sides of what slavery was like too. It's interesting, very much like the status quo. The given circumstances were that slavery existed, people had and were slaves, but they still had to behave as human beings throughout. There's no moustache twirling in it, which is what I like about it. Yes, some people were heavy-handed but there were people who were just human beings and were toxically affected by what they were doing o make their money.

• You know about this world from your ancestry but do you think it's been represented on TV this way

I think it's the time to see it. We have seen a great change recently in terms of represented on screen and telling stories. So with the kind of good content coming up, people also want to watch and know about such chapters and people of history. We have heard a lot of stories about slavery like Belle, 12 Years a Slave, Django, but this is important because it presents an alternate perspective on it. There's a zeitgeist in the air to tell stories about slavery but I think gatekeepers who are in charge of what we watch get a bit frightened, thinking 'is this fine?' But we say, show it, it's important for nearly to have a lower than the say that the say is the say that the say is the say is the say that the say is the sa people to know.

I wasn't taught this stuff at my school. So I think it's important for young people to know what had happened. If you don't know your history, you can't predict your future. People mustn't be allowed to sweep these things under the carpet. These are the stories that must be told. After you've watched something like this, you won't be able to say you didn't know, anymore.

• Can you tell us who you play and what your way into him was? It's interesting being an actor now. I used to be a comedian and I was only concerned if things were funny or not. Now being an actor, you're more concerned with if things were true or not. Depending on who's directing you, sometimes, it's heightened or more naturalistic, but generally, you're trying to represent something truthful.

My character, Godfrey, who is the head slave at the Amity plantaa lion. But he's still a proud being. He runs things. It took me some time to get to where he's coming from. And I kept thinking about my father actually, who came to Britain in the 1950s and worked really hard. He wore his pyjamas under his clothes because it was too cold. Very austere person, he had a sense of humour but quite a lot of schadenfreude with it. He would laugh if something went wrong. For instance, someone slipping over in the snow might make him laugh but he wouldn't laugh at Frank Spencer on TV. He had this quite severe turn to his mouth. He would tease but you would barely know you were being teased until you saw a flicker of something in his eyes. So there's a lot of that in Godfrey. He's got a sense of humour but he keeps it very firmly entrenched. He challenges Caroline Mortimer and teases her but she doesn't know she's being treating it as a career. He has to make some decisions about what kind of a person he wants to be and I think that's a fantastic story arc. A character who is entrenched in slavery, has been strangely mind-warped into believteased. There's a fantastic turning point, which I won't reveal, because once he realises there's a possibility of freedom, he does realise that he's been slaving all these years and ing that this is a good thing to be doing — bossing the other slaves around, throwing his weight, thinkbeing strong, or maybe, 'a man' or ing he's the boss — but not being paid for it properly (because he's got a wife and family to take care of), he is also a slave. Then suddenly, he realises there's only this whiff of freedom. 'What would I do if I got freedom? Would I stay at Amity? Would I leave? Would I continue this job? Is this a career or is this slavery? It's slavery!' It all unfolds for him later. He teaches July about surviving. Very subtly, but he's keeping an eye out for her as there's a fatherly aspect to his character. He has a very sly, deadpan wit.

• Has there been a particular scene or a moment when filming that meant something to you or transported you back?

I think the scene when Caroline is making huge plans for a Christmas party and Godfrey is patiently trying to explain her that she doesn't have the money to afford all these grand plans and it all explodes. But there are a few moments when he is teasing her and all his colleagues can see that but she can't. Suddenly, it becomes very apparent and she explodes.

In that scene, you get a very strong sense of the line — Godfrey is behind the line — but there are moments when he creeps up to the line, having to hold in the laughter. And when he crosses it, there's an explosion. I think in all areas whether you're in jail, a concentration camp, in slavery — any of those restrictive and constraining places, there are those people who push it ahead. Godfrey does that too. He tries really hard. Well, it takes a lot of bravery and guts to be that per-

●Did you meet Andrea?

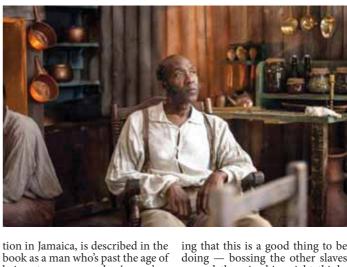

I was very lucky to be allowed to be into Ándrea's preparation when she was writing something as a part of another project that we were discussing together. It meant we got to speak a lot and we got to be friends. At the time, she told me to read The Long Song and I now see why she did because Godfrey was in there.

•What is the appeal of The Long

Song?
I'd say it's Andrea Levy. She should be like the British kitemark (a UK product and service quality trade mark) for standard. Fantastic writer of a fantastic story. And an alternate perspective to the slave experience that you perhaps haven't seen before. This is an iconic and fascinating story that utilises humour to say tough things. And I don't think that we have seen that before. I think we have only seen the very serious, dramatic and shocking experiences of those who lived the life of a slave. But we have never seen all that undercut by a sly sense of humour, with an unreliable narrator. We've never had that.

And I think Tamara does such good job of playing July with a deftness of touch. There is no sledgehammer stuff going on here. It's rather very delicate and light. There's humour when there needs to be humour. There's silliness. But it doesn't flinch from the truth of what was going on. And I think that's why you should watch it because here, you will not only find something that you can watch and enjoy but you also say, 'Oh my god, that happened.'

Technology in travel

Through smartphones and social media, a number of tools and technologies are influencing the way people travel and industry players operate worldwide. The travel sector has grown tremendously due to digital advancements like AI (Artificial Intelligence), voice-based applications, big data analytics, VR (Virtual Reality) and AR (Augmented Reality). This will (Augmented Reality). This will introduce a new segment of tourism in India — virtual tourism. If through smartphone technology, a traveller can have all the pertinent information s/he needs to have about the trip, through AR, a traveller will be able to teleport herself/himself to the farthest corner of the world. Indian travellers are largely looking for convenience while also increasingly becoming bolder in their pursuit for exploration. Hence, travellers, especially those belonging to the Gen Y and the Gen Z, will adapt to it enthusiastically.

With the increasing connectivity of flights, on-arrival visa facilities, on-demand car rentals, budget accommodation, increasing levels of disposable income, an irresistible appetite for exploring the world as well as current fast-paced lifestyles, these short hauls will be gaining more traction. They will become the 'most preferred type of holiday' among a large number of travellers. In 2020, more international destinations will become the favourites in the sphere of bite-sized travel.

Bleisure travel

Commonly known as bizcation, bleisure travel combines both travel for work or business and leisure, which is going to take the lead in 2020. Today, Indian travellers place greater emphasis on viewing the world and they don't want to let go of any opportunity for the same. With the newer generation of travellers stepping into the workplace and jet-setting off on work-related trips, they will be enterprising in their approach to make the most of their journey

With most of the newly-married populace leading busy lives, it's difficult for them to take off for a large chunk of time for their honeymoon. Thus 'mini-moon' travel will be a new and growing option for them as it offers a relaxed experience in a minimal amount of time. Through this, the couples can still have the best experience during a honeymoon right after their big day, followed by planning a long haul vacation later, in the

Adventure tourism

It has been observed that Indians have become bolder in their vacation choices with a large number of travellers actively opting for travel that ensures an adrenaline rush. Thus adventure tourism, which has ing up steam during the last year, will reach new heights in 2020. With the spike in demand for this type of tourism, many destinations, both domestic and international, are making appropriate arrangements for thrill-seekers and are introducing newer adventure

Spiritual travel

One of the biggest travel trends, which is expected to grow manifold in 2020, is spiritual travel. Leisure combined with spiritual journeys is witnessing an increased demand not just from the older generations but also from the younger travellers who are interested in seeking spir-itual harmony. Travellers will want to incorporate spiritual places or healing retreats, both nationally or internationally in their trips in the coming year. India being an impor-tant centre of religious history has a number of destinations that will see a surge in interest from Indian and international tourists. More Indians will opt to travel to pilgrimages and popular religious cities.

Cruise travel The sector has witnessed double-digit growth in the recent times. This is not limited to just families or new couples as even younger travellers are opting for cruise holidays over other traditional vacation spots. Given that cruises are becoming extremely stylised and offering multi-destination routes along with a range of amenities including adventure activities, entertainment shows, and authentic cuisines, they are sure to be included in more travel itineraries. More cruise companies will be offering affordable packages as there will be a surge in interest from varied segment of travellers who wish to experience this □Given your access to TV and podcast audiences, why write a book?

There are certain things that are easier to write about than to do an audio program about, things like the station wagon. ☐The book ranges so far afield with information on so many topics. Have you been gathering string for years?

I have gathered string for a long time, ideas that have been circulating. My colleague, the film critic David Edelstein, helped me with this one: I'm a big Streisand fan, as you can probably tell from the book, and drawn to the idea that the movie Funny Cirl when you watch it was forget that it's Girl, when you watch it, you forget that it's the story of this person, Fanny Brice. You think you're watching the story of Barbra Streisand. At least I think that, and it's because the performance is so eclipsing and volcanic that it kind of displaces the person it's about. And this is the kind of book that had a place

Actor VARUN DHAWAN will next be seen in Street Dancer 3D and claims that over the next 10 years, India will take over the global dance scene

The kind of talent Indian dancers have, I can say proudly we are one of best countries when it comes to dance. In the next 10 years, India is going to take over the dance scene. Dancers in our country struggle a lot because dance never used to be considered as a profession," said Varun, at the launch of the song Garmi from Street Dancer 3D in Mumbai. He was accompanied by co-actor Nora Fatehi, the film's director Remo D'Souza and producer Lizelle D'Souza.

He added: "I have spent so much time with dancers — and Remo sir is one of them — because he started as a background dancer. It gets really tough when parents of dancers or society don't look at dance as a career. They (Parents) feel that their kids are damaging their family's reputation by dancing because it is not work. I feel that it's work. They (dancers) travel to train in the morning and then reach their dancing venues. Sometimes they practice on the road, so this film is dedicated to all the dancers because if you can feel the music then anybody can dance?

Street Dancer 3D will clash with the Ashwiny Iyer Tiwari-directed Panga, starring Kangana Ranaut, on January 24, about which Varun said: "Ashwiny and (her husband and filmmaker) Nitesh sir are people I have met on a few occasions. Kangana (Ranaut) is someone I have known for a lot of years and I admire her work. I feel both films are very different and we are in 2020, so I think we shouldn't think about box-office clash. I feel people should watch both the films. This film (Street Dancer 3D) genuinely marks my return to doing films for kids. For the longest time, I did not made a film for kids and when I say kids, there is a kid inside all of us so. So, this film is for all of you. I hope kids and parents will have a good time watching the film." Street Dancer 3D highlights

India-Pakistan issues through the scope of dance and music. Talking about the film's message, Varun said: "Our characters in the film are dancing for India, and (they are) Pakistani immigrants. I think your motive behind being a dancer matters, and it drove me to do the film. Dance is not only for enjoyment but through the medium you can express a lot and you can change lives. In our country, when a kid is born or at birthday parties and at weddings, we dance a lot. I feel we are a very expressive dancing nation."

Street Dancer 3D stars Varun with Shraddha Kapoor, Nora Fatehi, and Prabhu Deva.

Two heavy defeats in five days have proved to be a reality check for Leicester's title ambitions with their focus now on making sure they hold off a chasing pack including Chelsea, Tottenham and Manchester United to secure a return to the Champions League.

"It's important there is a little bit of perspective," said Schmeichel. "If you told us we would be in the position we are at the start of the season we would have taken it.

"We take this as inspiration, that's the level. Those are probably the two best teams in the world at the minute and that's the level we have to aspire to be." Liverpool, by contrast, demonstrated why they are Champions League winners and Premier League champions in waiting. Klopp's men finally had the breathing space they desired via the arm of Caglar Soyuncu as he handled Alexander-Arnold's corner 20 minutes from time.

Milner had only been on the field a matter of seconds and stroked home the penalty with his first touch. Three minutes later, Firmino doubled his tally of goals and Alexander-Arnold added a third assist with a driven low cross that the Brazilian expertly cushioned before slotting into the top cor-Alexander-Arnold then capped a magnificent performance by blasting low and hard beyond Schmeichel into the bottom corner.

MANCHESTER: Ole Gunnar Solskjaer urged Manchester United to show some consistency after Anthony Martial's double and a Mason Greenwood rocket sealed a 4-1 win against Newcastle.

Solskjaer's side slumped to an embar-rassing 2-0 defeat at lowly Watford last weekend to raise fresh questions about the United manager's ability to inspire his players.

When Matty Longstaff put Newcastle ahead in the first half on Thursday, Solskjaer's critics were sharpening their knives again.

But Martial rode to Solskjaer's rescue with the equaliser and Greenwood's thunderbolt put United ahead before Marcus Rashford rounded off a first half blitz.

Martial netted again after the interval as United ended a two-match winless run in the Premier League and moved into sev-

DELHI IN LINE FOR FULL POINTS

→ shant Sharma was a picture of commitment while leading the injury-rid-den Delhi attack with an eight-wicket match haul to all but ensure an outright victory against Hyderabad on the third day of the Ranji Trophy group A encounter at Arun Jaitley stadium on Having dismissed Hyderabad for 69 in the first innings, Delhi were handicapped by Pawan Suyal's injury but that didn't deter Ishant from sending down 19 overs, grabbing 4 for 89 in the visitors' total score of 298.

Ishant finished with a match-haul of 8 for 108 in 29 overs.

Needing 84 to win, Delhi were 24 for no loss in the second innings and are just 60 runs away from full points. If they win by 10 wickets, the team will also walk away with a bonus point.

At a time when the Indian pacers' workload management has become a focal point and top stars only want to bowl a specific number of overs in red-ball games to get into the groove, the veteran of 96 Test matches toiled hard, bowled those extra overs and also encouraged young Simarjeet Singh (3/80 in 19.4 overs). Once Suyal was out of the attack with a groin strain, Ishant had no option but to bowl those extra overs and he started in earnest, trapping right-hander Himalay Agarwal in-front and then breaching Bavanaka Sandeep's (0) defences.

To give him respite, even Nitish Rana had to bowl the seam-up stuff. There were times, when Ishant pitched it short but whenever he looked to pitch it up, he was a handful. It was opener Tanmay Agarwal (103 off 154 balls), who was primarily responsible for thwarting Delhi's bid for an innings victory along with some rearguard action from Tanay Thyagrajan (34) and Mehedy Hasan (71).

On a breezy winter morning, Andhra had their backs to the wall with Porel dismissing skipper Hanuma Vihari (23) and in-form Ricky Bhui (0) off successive deliveries to finish the day with figures

Porel's new ball partner pace partner Mukesh Kumar accounted for 2 for 36 but Andhra rode on Gnaneshwar's dogged 45 not out off 145 balls to see through the day.

The ball was moving both ways and I was enjoying my good form and rhythm. We all are young so there was a lot of positivity and we bowled our hearts out," Porel said.

"However I could have bowled well in the last spell. I tried to bowl pace and was off the mark.

SERVICES WIN VS TRIPURA
NEW DELHI: Diwesh Pathania returned with a match haul of eight wickets, while Poonam Poonia had a hat-trick in his fivefor as Services routed Tripura by eight wickets in Elite Group C match.

Pathania claimed 3/27 to return with a match-haul of 8 for 63, while Poonia hogged the limelight with his hat-trick as he ran through the lower-order en route to his 5/26 to skittle out Tripura for 84 in their second essay.

Resuming the day on 16 for one with 31 runs in arrears, Tripura hardly showed any fight and failed to negotiate the threeseam attack being bundled out in 43.5 overs with Poonia dismissing Harmeet Singh, Rana Dutta and Abhijit Sarkar off successive deliveries.

Chasing a paltry 38, Services lost two wickets for six runs inside four overs but opener Abhijit Salvi (23 not out) and Arun Bamal (nine) ensured that there was no more hiccups taking the team home opening day, Railways riding on skipper Karn Sharma's unbeaten 112, grabbed a crucial 152-run first innings lead. Then Railways pacer Himanshu Sangwan (5-60) took five wickets, as Mumbai were bundled out for 198 in their second essay, after Test specialist Ajinkya Rahane failed miserably in the second innings as well.

For the 41-time domestic champions skipper Suryakumar Yadav (65 off 94 runs) and experienced Aditya Tare (14 off 47 balls) tried to rally the innings with their 64-run stand before Shardul Thakur (21 off 31 balls) along with Akash Parkar (35 not out), ensured that Mumbai avoided an innings defeat.

ustralia snatched two early Awickets to leave New Zealand facing an uphill battle to stay in the second Test on Friday as they chase the home team's 467, built on the back of a gritty 114 from Travis Head.

At the close on day two, the Black Caps were 44 for two with Tom Latham not out nine and Ross Taylor on two as a series defeat looms.

Captain Kane Williamson lasted only 14 balls, skying a James Pattinson delivery to wicketkeeper Tim Paine on nine while Tom Australia vs New Zealand Blundell, called up for the out-of-

Australia looked in complete control at tea on 431 for five, but they then collapsed to be all out for 467 within nine overs of the restart.

Skipper Paine departed for 79 seven balls after tea, with Mitchell Starc gone soon after for one. Head, Cummins and Nathan Lyon rapidly followed with Neil Wagner (4-83) and Tim Southee (3-103) doing the damage.

Australia started the day at 257 for four with Steve Smith on 77 and Head not out 25.

Head came into the match under pressure after a lean spell, but silenced his critics with only his second Test century, reaching three figures off 222

"It's very nice to contribute. It's pretty cool to score a Boxing Day hundred, nice to get my opportunity," said Head, adding that Paine counter-attacking when he came in helped.

"It helped that Tim came out and struck the ball as well as he did, it definitely took a lot of pressure off me.
