BANGLADESH PM FLEES COUNTRY

PTI ■ DHAKA

With Bangladesh descending into chaos, Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina surreptitiously fled the country in a military aircraft on Monday and the Army stepped in to fill the power vacuum, ending one uncertain chapter and opening another in the nation's restive history. As news of Hasina's departure spread, hundreds broke into Hasina's residence, vandalising and looting the interiors, providing dramatic expression to the anti-Government protests that have killed more than 100 people in the last two days. At the centre of people anger is the Hasina Government's controversial quota system reserving 30 per cent jobs for families of veterans who fought the 1971 liberation war. With volatile crowds taking to the streets — some clambering on Hasina's father and Bangladesh founder Sheikh Mujibur Rahman's statue and smashing it with hammers in a lasting image underscoring the fickleness of history — Army chief General Waqar-uz-Zaman announced that the 76-year-old Prime Minister has resigned. An interim Government will be taking over, he said in a televised address amid feverish speculation about where Hasina was headed. "I'm taking all responsibility (of the country). Please cooperate," Zaman added, signalling the end of Hasina's 15-year power run. The Army chief said he had met political leaders and told them the Army would take over responsibility for law and order. However, there were no leaders from Hasina's Awami League party at the meeting. As protests spiralled across the country, the Army chief said he had asked both Army and police not to Bangladesh Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina, who resigned on Monday, arrived at the Hindon airbase, Ghaziabad in a Bangladesh air force transport aircraft. She is reportedly planning to leave for London after a brief stopover at the airbase. National Security Adviser Ajit Doval met Hasina at Hindon Air Base. External Affairs Minister S Jaishankar briefed Prime Minister Narendra Modi about the situation in Bangladesh, sources said. Taking note of the fast evolving situation in Bangladesh, the BSF was on high alert while the Delhi Police further strengthened security around the Bangladesh High Commission in the national Capital. Air India and Indigo announced the suspension of their operations to and from Dhaka. Hasina's C-130 plane landed at the Hindon airbase in the evening. Indian Air Force fighter jets were airborne as soon as her aircraft entered Indian air space and kept an eye on it for some time, sources said.

fire any shots. Zaman also urged restraint and asked protesters to end the violence. He vowed "justice" for all the people. In Dhaka, restive crowds, swarmed the airport and even spilled into the runway. The Indira Gandhi Cultural Centre in the city's Dhanmondi area was damaged. Four Hindu temples suffered "minor" damages across the country, eyewitnesses and a community leader said. The Bangabandhu memorial museum — dedicated to Mujibur Rahman who was assassinated along with his wife and their three sons while serving as president in 1975 — was also vandalised. Hasina and her sister Sheikh Rehana had survived the purge as they were abroad. Hasina then spent six years in exile in India. The home of Dr Wajed Miah, Hasina's husband, was not spared either in the vortex of violence on Monday, local reports said. From Ganabhadan, the Prime Minister's official residence, came extraordinary visuals of protesters storming in and walking away with sofas and even chairs.

Turmoil worries families living in West Bengal

SAUGAR SENGUPTA ■ KOLKATA

The continuing violence in Bangladesh and the fall of Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina Government have raised concern among the families residing on this side of the border. Hundreds of families have lost sleep worrying about the fate of their relatives and other loved ones in the strife-torn neighbouring country. "I don't know how they are ... though from different communities their neighbours are good and understanding but given the scale and magnitude of the violence I wonder how they are now... more than 20 of them," said 80-year-old Chintamani Kar of Behala in South Kolkata expressing concern for his cousin brothers' families at Magura off Jessore. A Bengali film actor, requesting anonymity, said she was worried about her grand uncle who was in Kolkata last year and was scheduled to visit again during the Durga Puja. "Their family was attacked twice at Sathkira... we asked them to migrate but they would not... they had unflinching faith in the governance of Sheikh Hasina ... but now what will happen to them... we have not been able to speak to them for the past fortnight or so," she said. Sheikh Qamran, a businessman from central Kolkata, said he too had not received any news of his relatives from Dhaka. "Traditionally, they are supporters of the ruling party there... it is obvious... that helps in business... but now after the fall of this Government I don't know what will happen to them... particularly because the way the establishments are being attacked and torched," said the trader about his relatives who live near Banani area of Dhaka. He said he had even tried to get in touch with them via relatives in Dubai but in vain. However the condition of Arindam (name changed) is more pathetic. His uncle is a member of the ruling party and had been a panchayat member somewhere in Pabna district owning several acres of land and fisheries.

Bloodbath on Dalal Street

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

Stock market investors lost a whopping ₹15.32 lakh crore on Monday following a crash in Indian equities triggered by a sharp plunge in Japanese and other global markets. The 30-share BSE benchmark plummeted 2,222.55 points or 2.74 per cent to settle at over a month's low of 78,759.40, marking its worst single-day retreat since June 4, 2024. During the day, it tanked 2,686.09 points or 3.31 per cent to 78,295.86. Following the sharp decline in equities, the market capitalisation of BSE-listed firms dropped by Rs 15,32,796.1 crore to Rs 4,41,84,150.03 crore (USD 5.27 trillion). "Domestic equity indices came under the grip of global markets carnage as a host of external factors like recession fears in the US on the back of weak jobs data, interest rate hike in Japan leading to impact on Yen-carry trade and a raging Middle East conflict triggered massive sell-off across the board," Prashanth Tapse, Senior VP (Research), Mehta Equities Ltd, said. Setback for AAP over LG's 10 aldermen appointment

RAJESH KUMAR ■ NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Monday upheld the appointment of 10 aldermen by the Lieutenant Governor to the Municipal Corporation of Delhi (MCD) without the aid and advice of the Delhi Government's Cabinet. The judgment came as a major blow to the Arvind Kejriwal Government in Delhi amid tussle with the Lieutenant Governor on a host of issues. The top court pronounced its verdict on the Delhi Government's plea after reserving it for nearly 15 months. In its ruling impacting the fraught relationship between the LG's office and the AAP-led Delhi Government, a Bench of Chief Justice of India (CJI) DY Chandrachud and Justices JB Pardiwala and PS Narasimha ruled that the Delhi Lieutenant Governor is not bound by the aid and advice of the Delhi Government's Cabinet on appointment of aldermen since his powers in that regard is derived from the Municipal Corporation Act. The bench said the statutory power under section 3(3)(b)(i) of the Delhi Municipal Corporation (DMC) Act, as amended in 1993, empowered the LG to appoint the aldermen. "It is the law made by Parliament, it satisfies the discretion exercised by LG since law requires him to do so and falls under exception of Article 239," the bench held. Detailed report on Page 4

Coaching centres death chambers: SC; notice issued to Centre, Delhi

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Monday took suo motu cognisance of the deaths of three IAS aspirants due to flooding in the basement of RAU's IAS Study Circle in Old Rajinder Nagar and issued a notice to the Centre and Delhi Government, to examine if safety norms are being followed. The Supreme Court said coaching centres have become "death chambers" and are playing with the lives of students. "The incident was an eye-opener for all," it added. A bench of Justices Surya Kant and Ujjal Bhuyan was hearing an appeal by the Coaching Federation of India challenging directions of the Delhi High Court regarding the proliferation of coaching institutes in Mukherjee Nagar. The bench said it was not sure as to what effective steps regarding safety had been taken by the Government of the National Capital Territory of Delhi or the Central Government. Wayanad tragedy due to illegal habitat expansion: Min

ARCHANA JYOTI ■ NEW DELHI

As search and rescue operations continue in landslide-hit Wayanad district in Kerala which has claimed over 380 lives and left more than 100 missing, Union Environment Minister Bhupender Yadav on Monday attributed the tragedy to the "illegal human habitat expansion and protection for illegal mining in the fragile region by local politicians" under the tutelage of the Southern State Government. Talking to reporters here on Monday, Yadav also accused local politicians of failing to regulate and protect sensitive zones, contributing to the disaster that struck the region six days ago. The impacts of the landslides are still being felt by the locals, exacerbating the ongoing crisis in Wayanad. "It is an illegal protection to the illegal human habitation by the local politicians. Even in the name of tourism, they are not making proper zones. They allowed encroachment of feel it's purely a mistake by the State Government. There has been illegal human habitation and illegal mining activity under the protection of the local Government. It is very shameful. They must protect nature and human lives," he said. "The Western Ghats is one of the most fragile regions in the country like the Himalayas. Serious efforts must be made to prevent disasters in such regions and the Kerala Government is also responsible for ensuring the same," Yadav said hoping that consultations on eco-sensitive zone notifications for the Western Ghats should be completed soon. Last week, i.e. on July 31, the Centre had issued a sixth draft notification to declare over 56,800 square kilometres of the Western Ghats across six states, including 13 villages in Kerala's landslide-hit Wayanad, Ecologically Sensitive Area (ESA), inviting suggestions and objections within 60 days.

AI to enable developments and prosperity in State: CM

PNS ■ DEHRADUN

Chief minister Pushkar Singh Dhami said that Artificial Intelligence will enable important developments in ecology, economy, technology, accountability and sustainable development. All experts and those discharging various responsibilities will also have to learn about AI, he said while speaking at a conclave on AI for Uttarakhand organised by the Uttarakhand State Council for Science and Technology (UCOST) here on Monday.

The CM said that a roadmap has been prepared in Uttarakhand for AI development along with science, technology and innovation policy. Stating that AI affects all aspects of human life, Dhami said that Prime Minister Narendra Modi also lays special focus on science, technology and AI. "Many things are being achieved with the use of AI which has also helped save time. It has brought about revolutionary changes in scientific research and the routine lives of people. Apart from becoming a major reason for innovation in industry, medical treatment, agriculture, education, health and science, it can also play a major role in the development and prosperity of the State," the CM said.

He further said that effective work can be done with the help of AI in the spheres of disaster management and climate change in Uttarakhand.

The UCOST director general Durgesh Pant said that this is the era of AI. "Apart from being Devbhumi, Uttarakhand is also the land of spiritual, scientific solutions where various prominent central institutions are located.

We are moving ahead towards becoming a knowledge State as this will help Uttarakhand become empowered and prosperous," he said. Pant also stressed on the need for using the potential of AI in agriculture, tourism, good governance, livelihood, health and other sectors to boost the State's development.

Transport Ministerial Employees Union to begin work boycott over suspensions from today

PNS ■ DEHRADUN

The Uttarakhand Transport Ministerial Employees Union will start a work boycott from Tuesday, protesting the government's lack of response to its grievances over the suspension of four transport officials. These officials were suspended by the Transport department following the accident in Rudrapur on June 15, which resulted in the deaths of 16 persons. The suspended officials, including the then Tapovan checkpoint in-charge Yashveer Singh Bisht, junior assistant Vivek Uniyal, transport sub-inspector Mehtab Ali and transport constable Amar Saini, were accused of negligence at the Tapovan checkpoint in Rishikesh on the day of the accident. Union members said that the senior department officials based their decision on a report from the lead agency which also highlighted the negligence of police and Public Works Department (PWD) personnel, who have not faced any disciplinary action. The general secretary of the union, Vinod Chamoli questioned why the police personnel, who were also deployed at the checkpoint and along the route, have not been held accountable. He said that the department had requested the officiating director general of police, Abhinav Kumar, to initiate disciplinary action against the police personnel on duty that day, yet no such measures have been taken so far. Chamoli said that the transport ministerial employees staged a two hours work boycott on Monday and since the department failed to address their issue, they have decided to start a work boycott from Tuesday onwards across the State.

Third national conference of ISA held at HIMS

PNS ■ DEHRADUN

The information system should be strengthened to ensure that the public is made aware of the government's public welfare schemes. Along with modern technology, print, electronic and social media should be used effectively, chief minister Pushkar Singh Dhami said. Visiting the Directorate of Information and Public Relations, Dhami also announced that the corpus for the journalist welfare fund will be increased from Rs five crore to Rs 10 crore. He also directed officials to check the feasibility of group insurance for journalists. A system should also be put in place for accreditation of journalists till the Tehsil level. He said that the Information department is the link between the government and the public and that it should ensure that the works and schemes of the government are communicated in simple language through the media to the public.

Menace of stray and domesticated cattle ambles on in Dehradun

PNS ■ DEHRADUN

The roads of Dehradun are becoming increasingly hazardous, not just due to stray cattle but also domesticated cattle that dairy owners have started leaving on the streets. This issue is particularly troublesome during early morning, evening and late night hours, causing significant disruptions for commuters. Initially, it was only stray cattle that posed a danger but now dairy owners have begun leaving their cows and buffaloes on the roads early in the morning. These cattle are retrieved in the evening for milking and then released back onto the streets. This practice has intensified the problem, especially during the monsoon season, when the animals also suffer more and often disrupt traffic or cause accinear-miss incidents. I have a night shift so I go to work at 8 PM via Balbir Road and return around 4 AM. I have unfortunately hit two cattle mistakenly. It injured them as well as me," he said. Parents are also worried about the safety of their children, as cattle frequently roam residential areas, making daily commutes to school or the market difficult. A Laddpur resident, Deepa Chauhan said that the presence of cattle on main roads and in colonies is increasing, yet authorities have not taken concrete steps to address the issue. "Whenever we drive during the night, we can spot cattle parking themselves in groups on roads across the city. We become cautious and drive slowly to avoid bumping into one. Most of the cattle belong to dairies set in our nearby colonies but no action has been taken against them so far." In response to these growing concerns, Dehradun district magistrate Sonika announced plans to address the issue. She stated that she will ask the Municipal Corporation of Dehradun (MCD) and agencies concerned to take action against cattle owners who leave their animals on the roads. The Dehradun municipal commissioner Gaurav Kumar also acknowledged the problem, stating that the corporation does periodically pick up stray cattle. He assured that he will direct officials concerned to take more stringent actions against it. Despite these assurances, residents remain skeptical about the effectiveness of these measures. The persistent presence of both stray and domesticated cattle on Dehradun roads continues to be a significant threat to commuter safety. The locals seek immediate and sustained action to ensure safer roads for all.

This poses a significant risk, especially in poorly lit areas, resulting in several

Revenue collection from mining sector shows upward trend

PNS ■ DEHRADUN

The attempts of the State government under chief minister Pushkar Singh Dhami to increase revenue from the mining sector by initiating reforms, simplifying the process and starting e-tendering of mining lots have started yielding results. In the first four months (April to July) of the current financial year (2024-25), the department has collected a revenue of Rs 333.17 crore which is 67 per cent more than the revenue collected in the corresponding period in the last financial year. The department had collected revenue of Rs 645.42 crore in the FY 2023-24 which was Rs 173.27 crore more than the revenue collection of FY 2022-23. The department was given a target of Rs 875 crore each for the FY 2023-24 and 2022-23. In the FY 2022-23, the department had only collected revenue of Rs 472.25 crore.

The director of Mines and Geology, Rajpal Legha said that the department is working hard to achieve the revenue target set up by the State government for the FY 2024-25. He said that the state government's initiatives such as simplification in the Uttarakhand sub mineral extraction regula-

Short Assembly session a joke on people of Uttarakhand: Mahara

PNS ■ DEHRADUN

The Pradesh Congress Committee (PCC) president Karan Mahara has said that the decision of the State government to hold the three-day long Assembly session in Gairsain is a bad joke on the people of Uttarakhand. He said using the session in Gairsain which involves shifting of the government machinery and staff, the public representatives will not get the answers to their questions. Mahara added that if the questions raised by the public representatives are that the three-day session is very short and clearly shows that the State government wants to evade the questions related to public interest.

Responding to the statement of Parliamentary Affairs minister Prem Chand Agarwal regarding keeping the duration of the Assembly session three days, Mahara said that it is not possible to discuss the questions of public interest raised by the MLAs in the short duration of three days. He said that it is unfortunate that despite spending crores of rupees in organ-not heard and answered in the Assembly session, then there is no justification for the session.

He said that the BJP-led government of the State has deliberately kept the issue of permanent capital of the State hanging.

The PCC president said that the BJP-led governments at the Centre and State are insulting the people of Uttarakhand and the sentiments of the statehood activists by keeping the issue of permanent capital pending.

Congress should prepare for Assembly session lest even a day prove too long for it: BJP

PNS ■ DEHRADUN

The Bharatiya Janata Party State president Mahendra Bhatt said that the objections being raised by the Congress to the three-day duration of the Vidhan Sabha session in Gairsain are nothing more than part of the negative politics which the party is habituated to indulging in. He said that the Congress should properly prepare for the session, otherwise even one day will prove to be too long for its MLAs. Those who opposed the formation of Uttarakhand and its development do not want the Vidhan Sabha session to be held in Gairsain, he said, while suggesting that the Congress should stop playing politics even on this issue.

The BJP State president said, "Earlier, their MLAs used to write letters seeking that the Vidhan Sabha session should not be held in Gairsain and later the party used to take a different stand just for the sake of politics. They start every session with ruckus and ensure that the session ends in a similar manner. For them, the Vidhan Sabha session means raising ruckus and staging walk outs to grab media headlines instead of raising the issues of the general public. Everybody is aware of the activities of the Congress and its MLAs in the Assembly.

They have never played a constructive role by raising issues of the public and indulging in debate on important issues in the house.

They are now saying that the duration of the session is short but when it starts, they will make noise and stage a walkout. It would be better if the Congress prepares properly for the Assembly session otherwise, without issues and ideas, even one day will prove to be too long for its MLAs," the BJP State president said.

BJP's ploy of appointing 5 cabinet ministers in-charges won't affect Kedarnath bypoll : Rawat

PNS ■ DEHRADUN

Taking a dig at the ruling BJP for appointing five ministers as election in-charges for the upcoming Assembly by-election in Kedarnath, former chief minister and senior Congress leader Harish Rawat has said that such tactics of the ruling party will have no effect on poll outcome. Rawat said that the people of Kedarnath have made up their mind to teach the BJP a lesson for its consistent neglect of the constituency.

more ministers in the battle of Kedarnath by-election. He claimed that those aspiring for a berth in the cabinet are cautioning the BJP leadership about the chances of Congress party in Kedarnath. The former CM said that the Congress is bound to win the Kedarnath bypoll and induction of even a dozen ministers in the Kedarnath political battle field will have no effect on the poll outcome.

president Ganesh Godiyal from the constituency, he said, "The people have some expectations from the Congress party and it should file a candidate with clean image by chanting mantra of Jai Ganesha."

The Congress insiders are of the view that Harish Rawat's statement about the need for someone with a clean image to be the candidate of the party is a message to Congress State leadership that it should not consider the possible claim of former cabinet minister Harak Singh Rawat from Kedarnath.

He said that the BJP leadership can also go for expansion of the Dhami cabinet to induct

SC issues notice to Centre, Delhi Govt over IAS aspirants deaths

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE ■ NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Monday took suo motu cognisance of the deaths of three IAS aspirants due to flooding in the basement of RAU's IAS Study Circle in Old Rajinder Nagar, issuing a notice to the Centre and Delhi Government, to examine if safety norms are being followed.

The Court said coaching centres have become "death chambers" and are playing with the lives of students. "The incident was an eye-opener for all," it added. A bench of Justices Surya Kant and Ujjal Bhuyan was hearing an appeal by the Coaching Federation of India challenging directions of the Delhi High Court regarding the proliferation of coaching institutes in Mukherjee Nagar. The bench said it was not sure as to what effective steps regarding safety had been taken by the Government of the National Capital Territory of Delhi or the Central Government. "The recent unfortunate incidents taking away lives of some of the young ones who joined coaching centres for their career pursuits are eye openers for one and all. We therefore deem it appropriate to expand the scope of these proceedings as suo motu to issue notice to Union of India (through Ministry of Urban Affairs) and NCT of Delhi to show cause as to what safety norms have been prescribed so far and if so what is the effective mechanism introduced for their compliance," the court said in its order.

"This is horrible what we are reading. If need be, we will even close down these coaching centres. For the time being, the coaching should go online, unless there is meticulous compliance of building regulations and other safety norms." These places (coaching centres) have become death chambers. Coaching centres are playing with the lives of these aspirants who have come from different parts of the country with dreams and are working hard," the bench said. Such institutes must be made to operate via online classes until there is full compliance with the safety norms under the Master Plan of Delhi, 2021 read with Unified Building Bye Laws of Delhi, 2016, the Court suggested. "All complying with the fire safety norms. Terming the plea frivolous, the apex court dismissed the appeal while imposing a cost of Rs 1 lakh on the association and said no coaching centre should be allowed to operate unless there is compliance with fire safety norms and other requirements. "It is very inappropriate time when this has come up... This is a state of affairs where a lot of young ones coming from places across the country to Delhi have lost their lives. On this plea by Coaching Federation, we are imposing one Lakh cost to be deposited with the Supreme Court Bar Association and Supreme Court Advocates-on-Record Association," the Court directed.

On Friday, the High Court transferred the probe into the deaths of the three students from Delhi Police to the Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) "to ensure the public has no doubt over the investigation". Seven people, including RAU's IAS Study Circle CEO Abhishek Gupta and coordinator Deshpal Singh, have been arrested in the death of three IAS aspirant due to flooding in the basement of RAU's IAS Study Circle in Old Rajinder Nagar. The three who died were Shreya Yadav (25) of Uttar Pradesh, Tanya Soni (25) from Telangana and Nevin Delvin (24) from Kerala. Students enrolled in various coaching institutes have been protesting since the incident, demanding improved safety measures at coaching centres.

amidst Opposition from Union Cabinet Minister Nitin Gadkari, West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee, and several MPs against the 18 per cent GST on health insurance premiums, the Government on Monday told Parliament that it collected ₹8,263 crore from this tax in the 2023-24 fiscal year. Minister of State for Finance Pankaj Chaudhary noted that the 18 per cent GST rate on health insurance has been consistent since GST's introduction and the Government has received representations requesting for exemption or reduction in the rate of GST on life insurance and health insurance.

Meanwhile, it is learnt that several Opposition parties are planning to stage a protest in the Parliament complex on Tuesday to press for the rollback of 18 per cent GST on life and health insurance premiums. Replying to a written query on the GST in the Lok Sabha, Chaudhary said that certain insurance schemes catering to poor sections of the society and differently-abled, such as Rashtriya Swasthya Bima Yojana (RSBY), Universal Health Insurance Scheme, Jan Arogya Bima Policy and Niramaya Health Insurance Scheme are exempt from GST. In 2023-24, the GST collection from health insurance premium stood at ₹ 8,262.94 crore, while

Govt collects ₹8,263 cr towards GST on health insurance premium in FY'24

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE ■ NEW DELHI

₹1,484.36 crore was collected on account of GST on health reinsurance premium. In the 2022-23 fiscal, ₹ 7,638 crore GST was mopped up from health insurance premium, and another ₹ 963 crore from health reinsurance premium. In the 2021-22 financial year, GST of ₹ 5,354 crore was mobilised from health insurance premium, while Rs 826 crore came in from health reinsurance premium. In reply to a separate question, Chaudhary said, "After the introduction of GST with effect from July 1, 2017, GST is leviable on life insurance and health insurance services." To a question on whether there is a demand from the industry for withdrawal of service tax, Chaudhary said, "Representations have been received requesting for exemption or reduction in the rate of GST on life insurance and health insurance." GST rates and exemptions are prescribed on the recommendations of the GST Council, which is a constitutional body comprising representatives from both the Centre and the States/UTs, he added. In Rajya Sabha, senior TMC Leader Derek O'Brien had raised the issue, seeking reduction of 18 per cent GST on health insurance policies as high tax rate is burdening people, especially the middle class. Raising the issue during Zero Hour in Rajya Sabha, he also referred to a letter written to the Finance Minister by senior BJP Leader and Union Minister Gadkari making similar demands. "The demand is straightforward. Reduce 18 per cent GST on medical and health insurance. We should reduce it because this is an issue which is burdening people, mainly the middle class. That's why it needs to be reduced," said Derek. Further, he said there is an imbalance in the insurance sector, where 75 per cent is life insurance policies, and 25 per cent medical insurance. Derek said the West Bengal chief minister has written to the finance minister in this regard and many Opposition MPs have also raised the issue. Derek also rejected the argument given by the Government that the GST Council can only change this. "This is a flawed argument," he said, adding that the NDA has a majority in the council also.

PM took people into confidence on Article 370, claims book

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

There was complete clarity in my mind that taking the public in Jammu and Kashmir into confidence was absolutely essential for the execution of the decision," Prime Minister Narendra Modi says about his government's decision to abrogate Article 370 in Jammu and Kashmir.

The Prime Minister's remarks come in the foreword of a new book titled "370: Undoing the Unjust, A New Future for J&K".

"We wanted the decision, whenever it would be taken, to happen with concurrence of the people rather than imposition," he writes in the book, researched and written by non-profit organisation BlueKraft Digital Foundation and published under the Penguin Enterprise imprint. The book mentions in detail how Modi managed to achieve the goal that he set out for himself.

The publishers said the book, which is scheduled to release this month, "chronicles, what is inarguably the greatest constitutional feat in India's history and tells the inside story of how Prime Minister Modi managed the seemingly impossible."

It "delves into multiple blunders at the time of Independence that culminated into the unjust regimen of Article 370. It discusses the social, political and economic ramifications of Article 370 since its inception in 1949", a statement by Penguin said on Monday, which marks five years of revocation of Article 370. "It sheds light on the historical reluctance to challenge this provision and the eventual paradigm shift brought about by its abrogation in 2019..." it said.

Bill on quota for STs in Goa Assembly tabled in LS

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE ■ NEW DELHI

Law Minister Arjun Ram Meghwal on Monday introduced a Bill in the Lok Sabha to provide reservation to Scheduled Tribes (ST) in the Goa Legislative Assembly. As of now, the ST community has no seats reserved in the State's Assembly.

The Bill is titled Readjustment of Representation of Scheduled Tribes in Assembly Constituencies of the State of Goa Bill, 2024 and will empower the census commissioner to notify the population of STs in Goa. According to the Bill, the population of the Scheduled Tribes has increased considerably in Goa as per 2011 census vis-à-vis 2001 census figures. It noted that a "peculiar situation" has arisen in the State, wherein the population of the STs there vis-à-vis the population of SCs is considerably higher -- as per the Primary Census Abstract, 2011 for Goa. The total population was 14,58,545; the population of SCs was 25,449 and the population of STs was 1,49,275. "But no seats are reserved for the STs and they are unable to avail the constitutional benefit of reservation..." As there is no power with the Election Commission to determine the number of seats for SCs and STs in any State prior to the next census, the Bill was being brought to provide for enabling provisions. The Bill will empower the census commissioner to notify the population of STs in Goa. Based on it, the Election Commission will amend the Delimitation of Parliamentary and Assembly Constituencies Order, 2008, to make way for ST reservation in the 40-member Goa Assembly. The EC will take into consideration the revised population figures of STs and readjust the Legislative Assembly constituency once the Bill becomes a law. The proposal to bring the Bill was cleared by the Union Cabinet in March this year. As of now, no seat in the 40-member Goa Assembly is reserved for the ST community while one seat is reserved for Scheduled Castes.

SC seeks data on status of castes included in Bengal OBC list

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Monday asked the West Bengal Government to provide quantifiable data on social and economic backwardness and the inadequate representation in public sector jobs of the castes that were included by it in the OBC list for granting quota benefits. The top court also issued notices to the private litigants who had moved Calcutta High Court against the inclusion of 77 castes, mostly Muslims, in the Other Backward Classes (OBC) list. The High Court on May 22 struck down the OBC status of several classes in West Bengal granted since 2010, finding such reservations to vacancies in services and posts in the State illegal. "Issue notice, including on the application of stay (of the judgment filed by the State Government). The State of West Bengal shall file an affidavit before this Court explaining the process followed for classification of 77 communities as OBCs: (1) the nature of survey; (2) whether there was a lack of consultation with the Commission (State backward panel) in respect of any communities in the list of 77 communities designated as OBCs," said a bench of Chief Justice DY Chandrachud, Justice JB Pardiwala and Justice Manoj Misra. The bench also asked whether any consultation was done by the State for the sub-classification of the OBCs. The State Government filed the appeal against the verdict. "Religion indeed appears to have been the sole criterion" for declaring these communities as OBCs, the High Court had said and added that it "is of the view that the selection of 77 classes of Muslims as backwards is an affront to the Muslim community as a whole". In all, the High Court had struck down 77 classes of reservation given between April and September 2010, and 37 classes created on the basis of a 2012 law.

Germany joins Tarang Shakti multilateral air exercise

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE ■ NEW DELHI

Ahead of the air exercise 'Tarang Shakti', Ambassador of Germany Philipp Ackermann Monday said this is the first time that the German Air Force is exercising together with the Indian Air Force, and this extensive exercise "deepens our security and political ties" with India.

The first phase of 'Tarang Shakti' -- the largest multilateral air exercise in the country -- is set to be held at Sullur in Tamil Nadu from August 6-14. It will see participation of four countries -- Germany, France, Spain and the UK -- with their assets. "This is the first time that the German Air Force is exercising together with the Indian Air Force, and it is also the first time that it flies in India -- a truly historic moment. This extensive multilateral exercise deepens our security and political ties with India and the region. We are working on a security and defence partnership between our countries," Ackermann was quoted as saying in a statement issued by the German Embassy. The IAF on July 31 had announced that 51 countries were invited to take part in the mega exercise, with officials saying that nearly 30 of them would be taking part in it. IAF's LCA Tejas, Mirage 2000, and Rafale are to take part in the exercise. Rafale from France, Typhoon from Germany, F-18 from Australia and F-16 from Greece, among others, would also be participating in the two-phase exercise. "Tarang Shakti is our first exercise with the Indian Air Force in India. We have been working on this for a long time with our Indian partners and now the time has come."

Hold elections in J&K as per SC-set deadline, says Congress

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE ■ NEW DELHI

The Congress on Monday demanded that elections in Jammu and Kashmir must be held according to the Supreme Court-set deadline, with party Chief Mallikarjun Kharge alleging that the BJP's policy on J-K and Ladakh neither respects 'Kashmiriyat' nor upholds 'Jamhuriyat'.

Kharge's remarks come on the fifth anniversary of the abrogation of Article 370 and the bifurcation of the State of Jammu and Kashmir into two Union Territories of J-K and Ladakh. "BJP's policy on Jammu & Kashmir and Ladakh neither respects 'Kashmiriyat' nor upholds 'Jamhuriyat' (democracy)," Kharge said in a social media post.

"The Modi Government had claimed that this move would help to fully integrate Jammu and Kashmir, boost economic development of the region and prevent terrorism and separatism. However, the reality is starkly different," he said. Since 2019, there have been 683 fatal terror attacks, resulting in the martyrdom of 258 security personnel and the loss of 170 civilian lives, the Congress Chief said.

Notably, 25 terror attacks have occurred in the Jammu region since Prime Minister Narendra Modi's third oath, claiming the lives of 15 soldiers and injuring 27, he said. Kharge also claimed that targeted killings of Kashmiri Pandits have become a norm in the past few years. A staggering 65 per cent of Government department posts in Jammu and Kashmir remain vacant since 2019, he said. The unemployment rate in Jammu and Kashmir stands at 10 per cent, with an alarming 18.3 per cent youth unemployment rate, he said. Despite the introduction of the New Industrial Policy in 2021, a mere 3 per cent of investments have materialised on the ground, Kharge said. He further claimed that 40 per cent of projects under the PM's Development Package, 2015, remain pending. "Jammu and Kashmir's net state domestic product (NSDP) growth rate has declined from 13.28% (April 2015-March 2019) to 8.73% post-2019," he said. The people of Jammu and Kashmir and Ladakh yearn for normalcy, a sentiment they conveyed to Rahul Gandhi during the Bharat Jodo Yatra, Kharge said. "We demand that elections are held according to the Supreme Court set deadline so that people can elect their own representatives, secure Constitutional rights and put a full stop to this mechanism of being 'ruled by bureaucracy,'" Kharge asserted.

The Indian National Congress stands firmly with the people of these regions, which are an integral part of India, he added. Whenever Assembly elections are held in Jammu and Kashmir, they will be the first since provisions of Article 370 of the Constitution were abrogated and the erstwhile State divided into two Union Territories in 2019. Last December, the Supreme Court directed the poll panel to hold Assembly elections in Jammu and Kashmir by September 30.

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE ■ NEW DELHI

External Affairs Minister S Jaishankar will inaugurate the first Bay of Bengal Initiative for Multi-Sectoral Technical and Economic Cooperation (BIMSTEC) Business Summit here which aims to foster greater regional collaboration through robust trade and investment relations among the members of the seven-nation grouping. The summit will be hosted by the Ministry of External Affairs in association with the Confederation of Indian Industries (CII) from August 6-8, the MEA said in a statement on Monday. The first edition of the Business Summit aims to foster greater regional collaboration through robust trade and investment relations among the member countries of the BIMSTEC, it said. It will be inaugurated by Jaishankar. Union Minister of Commerce and Industries Piyush Goyal and other leaders will deliver keynote addresses. Several ministers of the BIMSTEC member States from the ambit of trade, commerce and industry, as well as energy, along with high-ranking Government officials, policymakers, entrepreneurs and industry associations will participate in the event, the MEA said. The event will bring together more than 300 key stakeholders from across the Bay of Bengal region to facilitate economic collaboration and explore ways ahead in focus areas such as trade facilitation, regional connectivity, energy security, inclusive growth and sustainable development.

Ready to fight legally and politically on Guv's possible nod for prosecution: Karnataka CM

PTI ■ BELAGAVI (KARNATAKA)

Karnataka Chief Minister Siddaramaiah on Monday said that the Congress government led by him is ready to fight legally and politically, in case Governor Thaawarchand Gehlot rejects the Cabinet's advice to withdraw the "show-cause notice" to him in connection with the Mysuru Urban Development Authority (MUDA) site allotment 'scam', and grants permission for prosecution. Speaking to reporters here, he said, "We have said that the show-cause notice has to be withdrawn. Also, we have asked for the petition by T J Abraham (activist) seeking permission for prosecution to be rejected. Let's see what decision the Governor takes. He has not made a decision yet."

"We are ready to fight legally...Both legally and politically we will fight," he said. Based on a petition filed by advocate-activist T J Abraham, the Governor had issued a "show-cause notice" on July 26 directing the chief minister to submit his reply to the allegations against him within seven days, as to why permission for prosecution should not be granted against him. The Karnataka government on Thursday "strongly advised" the Governor to withdraw his "show-cause hope that the Governor will not reject the Cabinet's advice to withdraw his "show-cause notice" to the chief minister. He said, in case the Governor rejects the Cabinet's advice and grants permission for prosecution against the CM, the Congress government will fight it legally. "As a Cabinet we have advised the Governor to withdraw his show-cause notice and to reject the petition seeking Siddaramaiah's prosecution by activist T J Abraham. I'm hopeful and don't feel that the Governor will do it (sanction prosecution), despite the Cabinet's advice along with facts," Parameshwara said. "He (the Governor) might have some powers, but I don't feel that he will reject the advice of the Cabinet so easily. In case he still goes ahead and gives permission for prosecution, we will fight legally," the Home Minister told reporters.

Kerala landslides: Major General Mathew returns after successful rescue mission

PTI ■ WAYANAD (KERALA)

A senior Army officer who coordinated the rescue efforts in landslide-ravaged Wayanad in Kerala, has said that the operation was the largest he had been part of since the devastating 1999 Odisha cyclone. In a statement on Monday, the Wayanad district authorities said that Major General V T Mathew, who led the rescue operations in Chooralmala and Mundakkai areas, has returned to the Kerala-Karnataka Headquarters in Bengaluru after making the path for rescue of hundreds of people affected by July 30 disaster. District Collector D R Meghashree bid farewell to the Major General, expressing the state's gratitude and respect. According to the statement, Mathew, the General Officer Commanding of Kerala-Karnataka, said despite the challenging weather conditions and unfamiliar terrain, he was extremely satisfied that the force was able to rescue more people and ensure the massive rescue operation was successful. "Initially, the rescue operations were carried out, risking lives," Mathew is quoted as saying in the statement issued by the district administration. He also said that this is the largest rescue operation he has been a part of since the 1999 Odisha cyclone disaster, indicating the magnitude of the Wayanad disaster, the statement said. Expressing deep sorrow over the loss of lives, including those of children, the elderly, women, and youth, he said that all the army personnel share the grief of the families of the deceased, it added. Rescue operations were swiftly launched by various forces, including police, fire services, and the National Disaster Response Force (NDRF), following landslides in Chooralmala and Mundakkai areas on July 30. The Army joined the efforts at 12.30 pm on July 30 and managed to rescue several people in the initial stages of the operation, the statement said. Major General Mathew arrived and took charge of the rescue mission on July 31. The team of over 500 personnel included experts from the Madras Engineering Group, who were skilled in building Bailey bridges. On the first day itself, around 300 people were rescued from the disaster site. Hailing from Kerala, Mathew has served as a Commanding Officer on the border areas. He has been awarded the President's War Service Medal in 2021 and the President's Ati Vishisht Seva Medal in 2023. He has also served for two years as part of the UN peacekeeping force in African countries Sudan and Congo.

Bihar: Nine Kanwariyas electrocuted to death

PTI ■ HAJIPUR (BIHAR)

At least nine Kanwar Yatra pilgrims were electrocuted to death and two others sustained injuries when the vehicle they were travelling in came in contact with a high-tension overhead wire in Bihar's Vaishali district, a senior official said on Monday. The incident took place in Sultanpur village in Industrial police station area around 11.15 pm on Sunday. Officials investigating the matter said action will be taken if lapses are found on anyone's part. Bihar Chief Minister Nitish Kumar expressed grief over the deaths. A statement issued by the chief minister's office (CMO) said, "The CM has expressed grief over the death of nine Kanwariyas. The CM has said that ex-gratia of Rs 4 lakh each has been provided to the next of the kin of the deceased by the authorities concerned." "Nine pilgrims (Kanwariyas) died and two others sustained injuries when the top portion of their vehicle touched a high-tension overhead wire in Sultanpur village under the jurisdiction of the Industrial police station. They were going to Baba Harihar Nath Temple in Sonapur to perform Jalabhishek," Vaishali District Magistrate Yashpal Meena told PTI. "Preliminary investigation suggested that the victims did not take the dedicated route fixed for the Kanwariyas. The two injured persons have been admitted to a hospital. Both of them are out of danger. The bodies have been sent for post-mortem examination," he said. The DM said that the district administration has ascertained the identity of the deceased, who hailed from

Kedarnath: Over 130 pilgrims airlifted as rescue operation picks up in clear weather

PTI ■ RUDRAPRAYAG (U'KHAND)

More than 130 people were airlifted to safety as rescue operations on the damaged Kedarnath yatra route entered its fifth day on Monday. Air rescue operations gained momentum with the weather clearing in Kedar Valley and the Indian Air Force's (IAF) Chinook and MI17 helicopters aiding in the evacuation of pilgrims, earlier being carried out largely by small helicopters, officials said. Till 9 am, 133 people were evacuated to safety outside Kedarnath Dham, they said. State Disaster Response Force (SDRF), National Disaster Response Force (NDRF) and other rescue teams sent 100 other people from Kedarnath Dham to Lincholi from where they will be airlifted to Shersi helipad. Disaster management and rehabilitation secretary Vinod Kumar Suman on Sunday said that 10,374 people had been rescued from various stops on the yatra route such as Kedarnath, Lincholi, Bhimbali and Gaurikund.

Only 350 pilgrims were left in Kedarnath and 50 in Lincholi, he had said. Dense cloud cover in Kedarnath and surrounding areas had hampered air operations on Sunday as the IAF's Chinook helicopter could not make even a single sortie. Only 60 people were evacuated by three sorties made by the MI17 helicopter, Suman had said. Apart from some pilgrims, only priests, shopkeepers, horse and palanquin operators are now left in Kedarnath and Gaurikund and, if they want to come, they will also be evacuated, he had said. Adequate arrangements for food, water and accommodation have been made for those evacuated in Sonprayag, Shersi, Chaumasi, Chardham helipad and Kedarnath helipad, the official said on Sunday. Due to heavy rainfall and a cloudburst on July 31, the Kedarnath trek route was washed away at many places, the differently-abled, sick and the elderly in Sonprayag. It has deployed two sniffer dogs in the search and rescue operations. The operation from Lincholi to Rambada has been completed and no victim was found. NDRF teams are continuously conducting search operations in the forests and around the Mandakini river. The officials believe that many people might have moved towards the forests due to fear of the rain. Sniffer dogs have been deployed to search for them. Chief Minister Pushkar Singh Dhami, who is personally monitoring the search and rescue, appreciated the participation of locals in the operations. In a post on social media, he called it "Devbhoomi's culture" of "Atithi Devo Bhava". Mentioning many by name, he said, "The administration is getting full cooperation of local people in the rescue operations going on in the Kedarnath area." Expressing his gratitude to the locals, he said, "Your tireless efforts prevented major damage by heavy rain."

Heavy rain pounds Navsari, Valsad districts in Gujarat, rivers in spate; 1,000 people evacuated

PTI ■ AHMEDABAD

Heavy rains battered Navsari and Valsad districts in south Gujarat, sending rivers in spate and prompting the evacuation of more than 1,000 people from water-logged low-lying areas on Monday. Khergam taluka in Navsari district received 229 mm of rainfall in 24 hours up to 6 AM on Monday while 12 talukas in Dangs and Tapi districts in South Gujarat received more than 100 mm of rainfall during this period. State Emergency Operation Centre (SEOC) data showed. Aurang River in Valsad taluka crossed the danger mark amid incessant rainfall in the upstream areas. Flood waters of the Kaveri and Ambika rivers in neighbouring Navsari district inundated low-lying areas. Approximately 1,000 people were shifted to safety in Gandevi taluka in Navsari district after heavy rainfall triggered a flood in Ambika and Kaveri rivers on Sunday. Seven labourers stranded in a flooded pond were rescued by National Disaster Response Force (NDRF) personnel on Sunday, Valsad district administration stated. "Around 162 people were relocated and shifted to shelter homes from low-lying areas in Valsad city. A man was swept away in flood water in Dharampur taluka of the district," said incharge collector AR Jha. Gandevi MLA Naresh Patel said at least 1,000 people were relocated to safety in the area in Navsari district. "An elderly man was swept away in the flood and effort is underway to recover his body," Patel said. Chief Minister Bhupendra Patel spoke with collectors of Navsari and Valsad districts, directing them to shift residents of low-lying areas to safer places and prevent loss of life and property due to rain. Khergam taluka in Navsari district was pounded by 229 mm rainfall in 24 hours ending 6 AM on Monday, followed by 185 mm and 180 mm rainfall in Dharampur and Valsad talukas, respectively. At least 12 talukas, including the Dangs and Tapi districts in south Gujarat, received Comparatively, north and east-central Gujarat recorded around 50 per cent of the cumulative average rainfall of the season so far, the SEOC stated. With upstream areas receiving heavy rains, the water storage in the Sardar Sarovar Dam in Narmada district crossed 60 per cent of its storage capacity at 2,04,901 million cubic feet (mcf). The water storage in another 206 reservoirs across Gujarat reached 3,25,972 mcf at 58.19 per cent of their total storage capacity, while 47 reservoirs are brimming. Ten other reservoirs are 90 to 100 per cent full, raising a high alert, the state Water Resources Department said. A total of 13 reservoirs in south Gujarat region are 70.32 per cent full. The water storage in 141 reservoirs in Saurashtra region increased to 52.68 per cent. In Kutch, 20 reservoirs are 52.15 per cent full.

Haryana Cabinet approves MSP for 10 more crops

PTI ■ CHANDIGARH

The Haryana Cabinet on Monday gave approval to the proposal of buying 10 more crops at the minimum support price. This came a day after Chief Minister Nayab Singh Saini announced at 'Vijay Shankhna' rally in Kurukshetra that the state government would buy all crops at MSP. Besides this, he had also announced waiving outstanding canal water irrigation charges. These announcements came ahead of the Haryana Assembly polls due later this year. Addressing the media after chairing a Cabinet meeting here on Monday, CM Saini said the Cabinet has given its nod to the proposal of buying crops at the MSP. The state government is already buying 14 crops at the MSP. Saini said 10 more crops, including 'ragi', soybean,

'jowar', and 'moong', will be bought by the Haryana government at the MSP. This move will boost crop diversification, said the chief minister. With this, the state government will buy a total 24 crops in Haryana at the MSP, he said. Haryana will become the first state in the country to buy all crops at the MSP, said Saini. Replying to a question, Saini asked the Punjab government to buy some crops at the MSP. He also asked the Congress-ruled states of Himachal Pradesh and Karnataka to purchase crops from farmers at the MSP. Saini further said the Cabinet also gave approval to the proposal of abolishing 'abiana' (canal water irrigation charges). With effect from April 1, 2024, 'abiana' will not be charged from farmers, he said. This move will benefit farmers to the tune of Rs 54 crore per year, he said. Notices for collection of 'abiana', which were issued after April 1, 2024, will be withdrawn, Saini had said on Sunday, adding if any farmer has paid the charges after April 1, then that amount will be refunded.

Puducherry CM Rangasamy reiterates plea for Statehood

PTI ■ PUDUCHERRY

Puducherry Chief Minister N Rangasamy on Monday reiterated the plea for statehood and hoped that the Centre would concede it. Wrapping up the two-day debate on a motion of thanks to the Lieutenant Governor's address to the territorial Assembly, the chief minister said that, in the present, Constitutional status of Puducherry being a union territory, "an elected government has limited powers. "We face several hurdles in implementing the decisions taken for the promotion of the wellbeing of the people and for the development of Puducherry." Rangasamy said that "it is the unanimous stand of all the legislators that Puducherry should become a state so that decisions of the government could be implemented fast and the wellbeing of people would also be promoted without delay." He also suggested that the Member of Parliament elected from Puducherry could also make out a case for grant of statehood in the Parliament. Members belonging to the opposition DMK suggested to the chief minister taking a delegation of legislators to Delhi to meet the higher ups there to push the demand for statehood. On the development path, the chief minister said that the Lt Governor's address contained several progressive policies and programmes to ensure potable drinking water, infrastructure development and also creation of infrastructure. Rangasamy said that a comprehensive plan was prepared by the administration to utilise the vast stretch of 750 acres in Karasur and Sedarapet block for promoting industrial development. He also said that all the defunct undertakings of the Puducherry government would be revived to ensure jobs for the unemployed youth. The Cooperative Sugar mill in Puducherry would also be revived through participation by private players, he said. The outgoing Lt Governor C P Radhakrishnan delivered the customary address on the opening day of the current budget session of the House on July 31. The Centre has named former IAS Officer of Gujarat cadre, K Kailashnathan, as the next Lt Governor of Puducherry. He would assume charge on August 7, official sources said. Earlier participating in the debate, members belonging to the DMK and Congress said that the address presented by the Lt Governor 'has let down the people as the address did not reflect people's expectations for growth in Puducherry and also for the revival of the textile mills." The DMK and Congress legislators staged a walk out during the debate to mark their protest against Speaker R Selvam's stand to deny opportunities to them to air their views on the policies of the NDA government at the Centre towards Puducherry.

Justice delayed

Chief Justice of India highlights frustration over court delays, calls for urgent reforms to address pendency

The Chief Justice of India has voiced a growing concern shared by many: the prolonged delays in Indian courts are causing immense frustration among the public, turning the judicial process into an unwelcome ordeal. In a recent statement, the Chief Justice D Y Chandrachud remarked, "People get fed up with protracted court proceedings, the process becomes a punishment." This stark observation brings to light the urgent need to address the pervasive issue of case pendency in India's legal system. The Indian judiciary is grappling with an overwhelming backlog of cases, which has long been a subject of public discontent and legal scrutiny. The Chief Justice of India's recent statement underscores the severity of this issue, highlighting how extended court delays are not only hindering justice but also eroding public trust in the legal system. As of recent estimates, over 40 million cases are pending across various levels of the Indian judiciary and may take 300 years to clear it at the going pace. This staggering number includes civil, criminal, and administrative cases, many of which have been unresolved for years or even decades.

The backlog creates a bottleneck that prevents timely justice, leading to prolonged legal battles and increasing costs for the litigants. Extended delays can lead to a lack of confidence in the judiciary, with people perceiving the legal process as slow and inefficient. When cases languish in the courts for years without resolution, individuals begin to doubt the effectiveness and reliability of the judicial system. Knowing that legal proceedings are likely to be drawn out, many individuals may avoid seeking justice through the courts altogether.

This reluctance is particularly pronounced among those who cannot afford prolonged litigation or who need prompt resolution due to personal or financial constraints. The inordinate delays can drive people to seek alternative, and often extrajudicial, means of resolving disputes. Moreover, businesses and investors rely on a robust legal system to enforce contracts and resolve disputes. Addressing these delays is crucial for maintaining the integrity and efficacy of the judicial system and ensuring that justice is accessible and timely for all citizens. Several factors contribute to the chronic issue of case pendency in India. A significant number of judicial positions remain unfilled. The legal procedures in India can be highly complex, often leading to unnecessary delays. Many courts lack the necessary infrastructure and technological support. But the biggest source of delay is the practice of frequent adjournments, often granted for frivolous reasons. A Bollywood film dialogue 'tareekh pe tareekh' sums it up succinctly. Some issues have been dealt with in the amendments to the Indian penal code which are now called 'Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita' but a lot more needs to be done to expedite justice and establish a rule of law! As the saying goes, "Justice delayed is justice denied," and the legal system must cope with the needs of a fast-paced society that we have today.

Grim prospects for peace in West Asia

The killing of Hamas leader threatens to derail any hopes for a ceasefire in Gaza further complicating efforts for peace in the region

UMANG KOHLI

Israel seems to have eliminated Hamas leader Haniyeh, using an airborne guided projectile in an early morning attack. Haniyeh was in Iran for the Iranian president's swearing-in ceremony as a state guest and was staying in one of the residences for veterans. The events in the Middle East are shaping dangerously, the things as they are turning out to be, it's not out of the scope of imagination that soon Iran may be part of a major regional conflict.

We have already seen that a confrontation between Hezbollah and Israel is underway in Lebanon. However, Israel has still not taken responsibility for the strike. Israel has been accusing Iran of harbouring Hamas leaders like Haniyeh and has openly vowed to kill them. Israel not taking responsibility for the attack shows that it does not want a direct confirmation with Iran right now. It remains to be seen how things play out, there is also a section in Israel that is suspicious of Iran's state media's claim that Haniyeh has even been killed.

Having said that there are little or no takers of the version that Israel is not responsible for the killing of Hamas's political leader. Palestinian Prime Minister Mohammad Mustafa has condemned the assassination of Ismail Haniyeh and termed it a violation of the entire international rule of law. The act is a grave violation of Iran's sovereignty and the supposed security bubble of the Iranian capital. This is likely to have far-reaching consequences in the short and the long term. Haniyeh, normally based in Qatar, had been the face of international diplomacy for Hamas. He had been an important part of internationally brokered indirect talks on reaching a ceasefire in the Palestinian enclave. This killing appears to set back chances of any imminent ceasefire agreement in the 10-month-old war in Gaza and Lebanon. Vowing to retaliate, Iran declared three days of national mourning. Iran has blamed the U.S. for providing Israel with the missiles that have been fired, and hence holding it directly responsible. The US itself has accepted that the risk of escalation is certainly up right now. The killing of Haniyeh has made the task of de-escalation, deterrence and dissuasion towards war, which is the goal of the UN and the international community, much more complicated. It has given a reason for those who want things to escalate on both sides to scuttle chances of peace and also provided them with the fodder to fuel further attacks on each other with impunity. The immediate consequences of this escalation, Netanyahu will get support from the far right in Israel and he may push for attacks deeper into Lebanon. Hezbollah will find legitimacy in taking on any possible target in Israel, civil or military. Iran would find it convenient to directly use some of its missiles against Israel and the yardstick to judge its effectiveness would be the number of civilians killed. The Houthis will attack commercial ships in the Red Sea even more, leading to loss of business and livelihood across the world. Palestinians would cry on the streets for lack of food and medicine even more, but like always would only get lip service. Oil prices will go up and some people will make even more money. More arms would be sold and better technology would be used to kill more people in less time. More and more areas may become dangerous even for the media. Schools and hospitals may be targeted even more since all the terrorists are hiding there only. In the US leaders would keep blaming each other for the escalation with each side doing what is required to be done to get votes. UN is likely to look even more helpless in the days to come. Apart from this humanity would be disgraced for it does not feel ashamed of any act of inhuman violent behaviour anymore. Aircraft carriers from the US will be deployed to safeguard the territorial integrity of Israel. There will be calls for people to join hands in the name of religion, and they will, only humanity will be divided and more people will die. Some people in India may find this killing of Haniyeh a great act of bravery, and they may even ask the political hierarchy to take lessons or even replicate this kind of attack. Little do they realise that Israel has been fighting for existence, and are not at peace with themselves, peace has eluded them since their existence. However, we as a country are at peace and no one can dare challenge our existence, and hence we should never think of acting whimsically. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

FOOD SECURITY VS RISING PRICES

Madam — Apropos "Modi reaffirms India's role as Vishwa Bandhu, Aug 4. According to him, India has become a food surplus country and second largest producer of foodgrains, fruits and vegetables etc. But the high prices of cereals, pulses, edible oils, vegetables and fruits etc. has indeed impacted households across the country and made them beyond affordability of many.

According to the Economic Times, since November 2023, food inflation in the country has persisted at around 8% year-on-year. The Opposition too raises repeatedly about high food inflation. Per capita consumption of pulses, fruits and vegetables in India are one of the lowest in the world. Low consumption of them affects overall health, leading to deficiencies in vitamins, minerals, and antioxidants and accordingly Indians are deficient in them, particularly in children it is a grave concern. Vegetarianism is a major dietary choice in India, therefore, plant-based food must be available at affordable prices in adequate quantities for a healthy nation.

INDIAN HOCKEY TEAM EXCELS

Madam—Who could have asked for more intriguing and a close contest in Sunday that added yet another unforgettable moment to India's hockey history that snatched victory from the jaws of defeat that once loomed large.

After surprising world class Australia in a span of 52 years, India continued their winning streak by defeating England 4-2 in a nail biting finish in Olympics Hockey that kept millions of fans glued to their t.v. sets. With this resounding win, India enter into the semi finals.

The national game of India Hockey is again in the limelight as India produced a real fitting spirit especially at a critic moment when the odds are stacked against them as they were reduced to 10. This also could not dampened their spirit as Veteran Goalkeeper P.R. Sreejesh saved one goal after to showcase her

Quota within quota

This refers to the news report, "Apex Court Upholds Quota Within Quota" (August 3). The Supreme Court's historic verdict now allows states to sub-categorize Scheduled Castes (SCs) for reservations. This sub-categorization is crucial as many SCs, particularly marginalized groups like the Balimiki in North India, Madiga and Arunthathiyar in South India, and Mang in Maharashtra, have been left behind in accessing benefits meant for SCs. Previously, states struggled to ensure their share of benefits due to an earlier Supreme Court judgment in the EV Chinnaiiah case. However, the recent Supreme Court ruling has highlighted the political dilemma faced by parties. During the assembly elections in Telangana last year, Prime Minister Modi announced a committee to examine the Madigas' demand for sub-categorization.

Implementing this sub-categorization is challenging in many other states, as it faces opposition from NDA ministers like Chirag Paswan and Ramdas Athawale. Sub-categorisation could affect the interests of dominant castes such as Paswan in Bihar, Mahars in Maharashtra, and Jatavs in UP, Rajasthan, and Delhi. Will the BJP risk losing Paswan's support in Bihar? Additionally, the BJP is seeking to gain Jatav votes in UP, traditionally supporters of the BSP. Therefore, it will be interesting to see the BJP's stance on the Supreme Court's decision.

Handling disrespect and finding inner peace

We should recognise the value of pausing and reflecting, to determine whether our reactions to perceived insults are genuinely justified

SANJAY CHANDRA

I read a beautiful story by a well-known Indian author about a middle-class household. The lady of the house locks herself in an earmarked dark room whenever she feels unloved and uncared for by her family. We too retreat to our inner self, the equivalent of our dark room, sometimes in our lives. During a recent vacation, my wife's friend compared me to a beast of burden.

The adjective is also often used by parents admonishing their good-for-nothing sons. The word is probably also applicable to all husbands. I sulked till a couple of hours later, I gave it back to her. This time my wife objected, forcing me into another sulk. They had probably expected a better sense of humour. I was not amused. A friendly neighbour objected to my entrance to attend a meeting in a rather loud stage whisper for reasons I was unaware of. I was asked to wait outside. It turned out that he was retaliating to an earlier fight with another neighbour. He had probably expected me to empathise with his unexpressed anguish. I felt insulted. Another time, a neighbour acting as an observer in society elections, got up rather aggressively, started shouting at me, and asked me to get out, on the grounds of some rules not mentioned anywhere. A couple of hours later, he came out and shook hands with me. I tried to mend fences by putting on my best smile. He rudely turned his face away, telling anyone who cared to listen, "He is a writer; he does not even know the rules." I could not understand the relationship between a writer and knowledge of unwritten rules. Rationally thinking about the incident a day later, I thought he was probably venting his frustration about inadequate writing skills. It was no consolation. I faced several unpleasant events in my professional life. I took them in my stride. One such incident happened within a few weeks after I had joined my first working post in the railways.

I sat in the senior foreman's office after my usual morning round of the maintenance shed, when I was interrupted in my discussions by the entry of 30 odd staff led by a union leader. Listening to the problems, I was startled by the landing of an earthenware teacup on the table. They were trying to gauge my reaction. I took it as a management challenge, not an insult. I witnessed a cat-fight between two young ladies in an upmarket shop in Delhi. One lady had tried to get ahead of the other at the payment counter. I was relieved that it remained a verbal duel, rather than turning into a fisticuff. In another incident, a mother trying to help her teenage son choose clothes was rudely snubbed by the latter, "Do not talk like a fool." The mother had tears in her eyes as she sur-reptitiously looked around, and then fussed some more over her child. I too looked the other way, embarrassed at the rude snub in public to a mother's affection. There are many such incidents that we face in our lives. We take a few more seriously than the others, while others we shrug off. The line between a perceived insult and rational logic is often blurred. It is easy to cross this line without even realising it. It may save a visit to the inner dark room, if we do not react, but pause, reflect, and remember the Greek philosopher, Epictetus, "It is not he who reviles or strikes you who insults you, but your opinion that these things are insulting." STRATEGIES TO COMBAT CHRONIC STRESS

Understanding and managing stress effectively is essential for a healthier life

SAKSHI SETHI

The human body is designed to experience stress. The 'fight or flight response' otherwise thought of as an 'acute stress' response are inbuilt mechanisms that allow an individual to deal with threats to survival. Stress at the workplace can arise from various factors, often stemming from the demands of the job, the work environment and individual characteristics. Chronic stress is a state of ongoing, persistent stress that can develop when a person faces prolonged challenges or pressures without adequate periods of relaxation or recovery. Unlike acute stress, which is short-term and can even be beneficial in certain situations (like a deadline or a sudden challenge), chronic stress lasts for an extended period and can have deleterious effects on both physical as well as mental health. Signs of chronic stress at the workplace can manifest in various ways, affecting an individual's physical health, emotional well-being, cognitive abilities and behaviour. Cognitive-behavioural approaches, mindfulness training and resilience-building programs have been shown to help employees manage stress more effectively. These strategies can enhance employees' ability to cope with stressors and reduce the negative impact of stress on their health and performance. It can lead to significant economic costs for employers, including healthcare expenses, lost productivity, absenteeism and turnover. Organizations through interventions such as job redesign, flexible work arrangements, employee wellness programs and stress management training can reduce chronic stress as these interventions aim to reduce job demands, increase job control and provide employees with the resources they need to cope effectively with stress. Recognizing these signs early can help in addressing the underlying issues before they escalate. Research shows that in the United States, the American Institute of Stress (AIS) has estimated that around 40% of worker turnover is due to stress and the cost of stress in the workplace has been estimated to be over $300 billion per year. Studies also show that perceptions of stress and coping mechanisms can vary across cultures. The shift to remote work during the COVID-19 pandemic has introduced new stressors related to work-life balance, isolation and digital overload. Ongoing research is exploring how these changes affect chronic stress levels and what interventions are most effective in this new work environment. Furthermore, studies highlight the role of leadership in either mitigating or exacerbating stress. Supportive leadership styles, clear communication and recognition of employee efforts can reduce stress, while authoritarian or inconsistent management can increase it. There is no denying the fact that different industries have unique stressors. For instance healthcare professionals often face stress due to high-stakes decision-making and emotional demands, while employees in tech industries might experience stress from rapid changes and constant innovation. This type of stress can lead to individual burnout, which is when the body's budget is depleted. Unlike acute stress, which is short-term and can even be beneficial in certain situations such as a deadline or a sudden challenge, chronic stress lasts for an extended period. It can have detrimental effects on both physical and mental health. It is the chronic stress that comes from any area of our lives that can lead to a place of exhaustion and demotivation. It's tough, but the individual needs to find the will within self to get inspired and take recovery into their own hands. Understanding the sources of stress is crucial for both employees and employers to develop strategies to manage and reduce stress, thereby creating a healthier and more productive work environment.

Japan's defence dilemma: Pacifism vs security

As the world commemorates the 79th anniversary of the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan contemplates pivotal shift in its defence policy

SANTHOSH MATHEW

As the world commemorates the 79th anniversary of the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, a profound moment of reflection intersects with a pivotal shift in Japan's defence policy. On August 6 and 9, 1945, the cities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki in Japan were devastated by atomic bombs dropped by the United States, marking a pivotal moment in World War II and the history of warfare. The bombings resulted in the immediate deaths of tens of thousands of people, with the total number of casualties, including those from radiation sickness and injuries, rising to over 200,000. Hiroshima, targeted first, saw the "Little Boy" bomb obliterate much of the city, while Nagasaki was struck by the "Fat Man" bomb three days later. The immense destruction and loss of life precipitated Japan's surrender on August 15, 1945, effectively ending World War II. These events also ushered in the nuclear age, highlighting the devastating power of atomic weapons and sparking global debates on nuclear ethics, warfare, and disarmament. The bombings remain a somber reminder of the catastrophic consequences of nuclear conflict and the importance of striving for peace and international cooperation. The devastation, which claimed the lives of civilians, imprinted an indelible mark on the nation's collective consciousness and laid the foundation for its pacifist constitution. In the aftermath of these horrific events, Japan adopted a policy of defensive neutrality, enshrined in Article 9 of its constitution, renouncing war and prohibiting the maintenance of armed forces for combat. This commitment to pacifism became a cornerstone of Japan's identity, earning it a place of respect in the global community and even frequent nominations for the Nobel Peace Prize. However, as the world grapples with evolving geopolitical threats, Japan has announced a significant shift in its defence policy.

The government has decided to allocate 2% of its GDP to defence spending, marking a departure from its longstanding pacifist stance. This decision, driven by perceived threats from North Korea and China, positions Japan as the second-largest arms importer globally, following Saudi Arabia.

Japan's new national security strategy is a response to the growing tensions in the region. North Korea has already conducted missile tests capable of reaching Japanese territory, while China's increasing assertiveness in the South China Sea and its broader regional ambitions have raised alarms in Tokyo.

These developments have prompted Japan to reconsider its post-World War II defence posture. Former Prime Minister Shinzo Abe, a staunch advocate for revising Japan's pacifist constitution, argued that the nation must strengthen its military capabilities to counter regional threats. Although Abe's tenure saw some legislative changes allowing for a modest self-defence force, widespread public opposition prevented a complete overhaul of Article 9. Nonetheless, Abe's vision of a robust Japanese military continues to influence current policies. Current Prime Minister Fumio Kishida, with the backing of both the House of Councillors and the House of Representatives, has pressed forward with this new defence agenda. However, public sentiment remains largely against these changes. According to a Kyodo News Agency survey, 80% of the population opposes the government's constitutional amendment efforts, reflecting a deep-rooted commitment to pacifism among the Japanese people.

The decision to shift defence policies on the anniversary of Hiroshima and Nagasaki is particularly poignant. The memories of the atomic bombings serve as a stark reminder of the horrors of war and the importance of peace. The destruction of Hiroshima and Nagasaki was not just a military strategy but also an unprecedented human tragedy. The bombings, justified by the U.S. as necessary to end the war, were, in reality, cruel scientific experiments that unleashed untold suffering and long-term consequences.

The atomic bombings forced Japan to adopt a peace-oriented constitution, promoting disarmament and dialogue over conflict. Article 9 has been a symbol of hope and a testament to Japan's commitment to ensuring that such devastation never occurs again. The policy shift, therefore, raises important questions about the future of pacifism in Japan and its role in international peace and security. As Japan increases its defence budget and modernizes its military capabilities, it steps into a complex and competitive arms race.

The nation that once stood as a beacon of pacifism now finds itself at a crossroads, balancing its historical commitment to peace with the pressing need to address contemporary security challenges. The legacy of Hiroshima and Nagasaki endures, reminding the world of the catastrophic consequences of war and the enduring value of peace.

As Japan navigates this new defence trajectory, it must reconcile its past with its present, ensuring that the principles of peace and humanity remain at the forefront of its national identity. In the shadow of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan's defence policy evolution marks a significant chapter in its history. The world watches closely as Japan seeks to uphold its commitment to peace while safeguarding its future in an increasingly uncertain global landscape.

The devastating bombings marked a turning point in World War II, leading to Japan's surrender and the end of the conflict. These tragic events imprinted a commitment to pacifism in Japan's national consciousness, enshrined in its post-war constitution.

However, with rising geopolitical threats from North Korea's missile tests and China's regional ambitions, Japan has no choice but to reconsider its pacifist stance and increase its defence spending, sparking a national debate on the future of its long-held commitment to peace.

Bangladesh's political shakeup: A diplomatic setback for India

The resignation of Sheikh Hasina poses a significant challenge for New Delhi, as it now faces an uncertain political situation in its neighbouring country

While Bangladeshis may be celebrating the ouster of Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina after she was forced to resign and flee the country on Monday, her removal is a huge blow to India. Not only had New Delhi-Dhaka ties flourished under her prime minister-ship but the Awami League leader had been mindful of India's strategic interests. She had even tried to keep India's strategic interests in mind vis-à-vis China while adroitly balancing relations with both. During her 15 years of unbroken rule, New Delhi-Dhaka ties enjoyed both stability and mutual trust. But with the army taking charge in Bangladesh and an interim government set to take over, India has a lot to worry about. For one, it now has to deal with a new dispensation after having built a very comfortable working relationship with the Sheikh Hasina government over the last 15 years. Secondly, it will also have to contend with the fact that it is the army that will be exercising actual control even with an interim government in place. Thirdly, India will be dealing with an entirely new political set-up if and when elections are held in Bangladesh to install a new government. With India having thrown all its weight behind Sheikh Hasina, it may be faced with a huge challenge to build ties with the Opposition parties. India could also be in deep trouble if the pro-Pakistan Bangladesh National Party (BNP) returns to power. It had recently triggered anti-India sentiments in Bangladesh by carrying out an 'India Out' campaign which fortunately fizzled out early. Opposition parties can fan the simmering of these sentiments again, especially given how closely New Delhi was identified with her government. Indeed, for New Delhi, ties with Dhaka had been a "son-ali adhayay" (golden chapter) under Sheikh Hasina who delivered on New Delhi's expectations, while choosing to downplay India's inability to deliver on the important Teesta waters sharing agreement. But with a new government in power, all this might change. New Delhi, therefore, will have to deftly manoeuvre its way through a tricky diplomatic situation now. It has no choice but to do so given that it has vital stakes in the stability of Bangladesh, ranging from the economic to the strategic, in a country with which it shares a 4,096-km long border.

It will also be hoped that the situation in Bangladesh will stabilise soon, knowing well that prolonged instability

there can have serious security and economic ramifications for India. For instance, taking into account New Delhi's security concerns, Sheikh Hasina had cracked down on northeast insurgents sheltering in Bangladeshi territory early on in her second stint as PM. Her government's relentless pursuit of the pro-Pakistan

BNP as well as its ally JeI, also helped India's security interests. Equally worrying for India has been the rise of other radical Islamist outfits like the Hefazat-e-Islam in Bangladesh, which had organised anti-India protests ahead of PM Narendra Modi's visit there. The over one million Rohingya refugees who fled Myanmar and are sheltering in Bangladesh too have been a security concern for India. Already home to a sizable number of illegal Bangladeshi immigrants, India would also be concerned about a further influx of refugees seeking to flee their troubled country. With five Indian states in the northeast sharing a border with Bangladesh, any such influx could pose a huge security challenge for the region. Additionally, prolonged turmoil there could hurt Indian efforts to boost connectivity to the NE via Bangladesh using rail links and the sea route. India has for long been seeking alternative routes to bypass the vulnerable Siliguri corridor, which if blocked can cut off land access to its entire NE. The push for shorter routes to the NE via Bangladesh, which would cut down time and costs for the movement of goods, could also receive a setback.

The quota stir has already hit bilateral trade after the movement of trucks was stalled at the land ports. While cross-border trade has now resumed, there have been huge economic losses on either side. Prolonged turmoil can only worsen trading ties between the two countries. Bangladesh is India's biggest trading partner in South Asia. In FY 2022-23, the bilateral trade was $15.9 billion, though it remains heavily skewed in favour of India. A lot is at stake for India as its close neighbour witnesses some tectonic changes in its governance and political landscape. It means it will have to put in all its diplomatic and political heft into its outreach to whoever is in charge of the new dispensation in Bangladesh.

Hasina: From record 4th consecutive term to dramatic ouster

PTI ■ DHAKA

Sheikh Hasina, who was elected for a record fourth consecutive term and fifth overall term this year, was always admired by her supporters as an "Iron Lady" before the dramatic development that abruptly ended her 15-year-rule in Bangladesh.

Hasina, who provided stability to the once military-ruled Bangladesh but at the same time criticised as an "autocratic" leader by opponents, was among the world's longest-serving female heads of government. The 76-year-old daughter of Bangladesh founder Sheikh Mujibur Rahman had been ruling the strategically located South Asian nation since 2009. She was elected for a record fourth consecutive term in January in an election boycotted by the main opposition party Bangladesh Nationalist Party (BNP) of former premier Khaleda Zia and its allies.

Born in erstwhile East Pakistan (now in Bangladesh) in September 1947, Hasina became active in politics while studying at the University of Dhaka in the late 1960s. She served as her father's political liaison during his imprisonment by the Pakistani government.

After Bangladesh gained independence from Pakistan in 1971, her father Mujibur Rahman became the president and then prime minister of the country. However, in August 1975, Rahman, his wife and their three sons were assassinated in their home by military officers.

Hasina and her younger sister Sheikh Rehana survived the purge as they were abroad. Hasina, who spent six years in exile in India, was elected as the leader of the Awami League, a party founded by her father.

In 1981, Hasina returned home and became vocal about democracy in the country ruled by the military, which placed her under house arrest on multiple occasions.

In the 1991 general elections, the Hasina-led Awami League failed to secure a majority. Her rival Khaleda Zia of the BNP became prime minister. Five years later, Hasina was elected prime minister in the 1996 general elections. Hasina was voted out of office in the 2001 elections but returned to power with a thumping victory in 2008 polls. Khaleda Zia-led BNP has been left in the lurch since then. Hasina escaped an assassination bid in 2004 when a grenade exploded at her rally. Soon after coming to power in 2009, Hasina set up a tribunal to try 1971 war crimes cases. The tribunal convicted some high-profile members of the opposition, sparking violent protests.

Jamaat-e-Islami, an Islamist party and a key ally of BNP, was banned from participating in elections in 2013. BNP chief Khaleda Zia was sentenced to 17 years in prison on corruption charges.

The BNP boycotted the 2014 elections but joined the one in 2018, which party leaders later said was a mistake, alleging that the voting was marred with widespread rigging and intimidation. In the 2024 elections,

Black smoke rises from the Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujib Medical University during clashes between protesters and Awami League members, on the first day of the non-cooperation movement in Dhaka, on Sunday, August 4 the BNP and its allies boycotted the votes, demanding polls under a non-party caretaker government. They alleged that Hasina cannot deliver credible voting. The polls were fought by 27 political parties, including the parliamentary opposition Jatiya Party. The rest were members of the ruling Awami League-led coalition, which experts dubbed as the "satellite parties." The BNP's boycott, however, raised questions about the credibility of the polls, which registered a low turnout.

Six months after the elections, a massive protest erupted against her government over a controversial quota system that reserved 30 per cent of government jobs for relatives of veterans who fought in Bangladesh's War of Independence in 1971.

Over 300 protesters were killed in violence during the protests that led to her dramatic ouster. Hasina presided over one of the world's fastest-growing economies and improved living standards in the South Asian nation in the past 15 years. The NEWSNEXTBD.com dubbed her the "Iron Lady" several years back and since then it was used by the Western media to refer to her.

Her supporters credit Hasina with humming development projects and providing stability in the country, which has witnessed military rule for years. Hasina won praise for the handling of the world's biggest refugee crisis as over a million Rohingya have taken shelter in Bangladesh after fleeing for their lives in neighbouring Myanmar to evade persecution after a 2017 army crackdown at their homeland.

Hasina is also credited for skillfully negotiating the rival interests of India and China as Bangladesh is virtually sandwiched between the two Asian giants. She got the support of both the big neighbours and Russia ahead of the elections. Bangladesh's per capita income tripled since Hasina took power in January 2009 while its gross domestic product (GDP) clocked at a growth rate of 7.28 per cent last year.

The country of nearly 170 million people has achieved near self-sufficiency in food production and raised average life expectancy to levels higher than neighbouring India. People close to her used to say that the premier is a "workaholic" and she performs the daily Islamic rituals.

Rising energy and commodity prices in the wake of the Russia-Ukraine conflict, however, forced her government to seek IMF support amid falling foreign reserves.

The workers in Bangladesh's main export-earning garment industry were dissatisfied with a recent wage hike and lodged protests in recent years. Political opponents described Hasina's government an "autocratic" and corrupt regime, while many civil society figures and rights groups accused it of rights abuses.

Kim marks delivery of 250 N-capable missile launchers to frontline units

AP ■ SEOUL

North Korea marked the delivery of 250 nuclear-capable missile launchers to frontline military units at a ceremony where leader Kim Jong Un called for a ceaseless expansion of his military's nuclear program to counter perceived US threats, state media said on Monday.

Concerns about Kim's nuclear program have grown as he has demonstrated an intent to deploy battlefield nuclear weapons along the North's border with South Korea and authorised his military to respond with preemptive nuclear strikes if it perceives the leadership as under threat. North Korea's official Korean Central News Agency said the launchers were freshly produced by the county's munitions factories and designed to fire "tactical" ballistic missiles, a term that describes systems capable of delivering lower-yield nuclear weapons.

Kim said at Sunday's event in Pyongyang the new launchers would give his frontline units "overwhelming" firepower over South and make the operation of tactical nuclear weapons more practical and efficient. State media photos showed lines of army-green launcher trucks packing a large street with seemingly thousands of spectators attending the event, which included fireworks.

range weapons designed to overwhelm missile defences in South Korea, while also pursuing intercontinental ballistic missiles designed to reach the US mainland.

Kim's intensifying weapons tests and threats are widely seen as an attempt at pressuring the United States to accept the idea of North Korea as a nuclear power and to end US-led sanctions imposed on North Korea over its nuclear program. North Korea also could seek to dial up tensions in a US election year, experts say. Kim lately has used Russia's war on Ukraine as a distraction to further accelerate his weapons development. In response, the United States, South Korea and Japan have been expanding their combined military exercises and sharpening their nuclear deterrence strategies built around strategic US military assets.

In his speech at Sunday's event, Kim called for his country to brace for a prolonged confrontation with the United States and urged a relentless expansion of military strength. He justified his military buildup as a counter to the "increasingly savage" military cooperation between the United States and its regional allies, which he claimed are now showing the characteristics of a "nuclear-based military bloc."

"It would be our choice to either pursue dialogue or confrontation, but our lesson and conclusion from the past 30 years ... is that confrontation is what we should be prepared more thoroughly for," said Kim.

"The United States we are facing is not just an administration that comes and goes after a few years, but a hostile nation that our children and grandchildren will be dealing for generations to come and that also illustrates the necessity to continuously improve our self-defense capabilities."

Kim also said the decision to hold the weapons ceremony while the country was trying to recover from disastrous flooding showed its determination to "push ahead with the strengthening of our national defense capabilities force without stagnation under any circumstances."

The floods in late July submerged thousands of homes and huge swaths of farmland in regions near the border with China.

Russia has offered flood aid to North Korea, in another sign of expanding relations between the two nations. Kim has made Russia his priority in recent months as he pushes a foreign policy aimed at expanding relations with countries confronting Washington, embracing the idea of a "new Cold War" and trying to display a united front in Putin's broader conflicts with the West.

Australia lifts terror threat level from 'possible' to 'probable'

AP ■ MELBOURNE

The Australian government on Monday elevated the nation's terrorism threat level from "possible" to "probable," citing concerns about increasing radicalisation among young people and community tensions over the Israel-Hamas war.

It is the first time the threat level has been elevated to the midpoint of the five-tier National Terrorism Threat Advisory System since November 2022. The level had been "probable" the previous eight years.

But Prime Minister Anthony Albanese added that while government officials think the current climate makes terrorism an increased danger, they didn't know of any specific threats. "I want to reassure Australians probable does not mean inevitable, and it does not mean there is intelligence about an imminent threat or danger," Albanese told reporters.

He said the government was acting on the advice of the Australian Security Intelligence Organisation, the nation's main domestic spy agency known as ASIO.

"The advice that we've received is that more Australians are embracing a more diverse range of extreme ideologies and it is our responsibility to be vigilant," Albanese said.

"We've seen a global rise in politically motivated violence and extremism. Many democracies are working to address this, including our friends in the United States and in the United Kingdom. There are many things driving this global trend towards violence. Governments around the world are concerned about youth radicalisation, online radicalisation and the rise of new mixed ideologies." Australian authorities last declared a terrorist act in April, when a 16-year-old boy was accused in the stabbing of a Sydney bishop while a church service was being livestreamed.

Hezbollah launches drone attack on northern Israel

AP ■ JERUSALEM

The Lebanese militant group Hezbollah said it launched a drone attack early Monday on northern Israel that the Israeli military said wounded two Israeli troops and set off a fire. The violence came as fears of an all-out regional war mount following the killings last week of a senior Hezbollah commander in Lebanon and Hamas' top political leader in Iran.

The Iranian-backed Hezbollah said in a statement it targeted a military base in northern Israel in response to "attacks and assassinations" carried out by Israel in several villages in south Lebanon.

The attack did not appear to be part of a more intense retaliation expected in response to the killing of Hezbollah commander Fouad Shukur in Beirut last week.

Israel and Hezbollah have exchanged near-daily strikes for the past 10 months against the backdrop of the war in Gaza, but they have previously kept the conflict at a low level that had not escalated into full-on war.

Last week's assassinations of Hamas political leader Ismail Haniyeh in Iran's capital, Tehran, and Hezbollah commander Shukur in Beirut raised tensions in the region. Israel has been bracing for a retaliation from Iran and its allied militias.

Gen. Hossein Salami, the head of Iran's paramilitary Revolutionary Guard, threatened Israel on Monday over the assassination of Haniyeh, warning that Israel was "digging its own grave" with its actions in its war against Hamas.

"They will see the result of their mistake. They will see when, how and where they will get their response," Salami said in a speech.

Israel returns more than 80 bodies to the Gaza Strip, Palestinian official says: A Palestinian official says Israel has returned more than 80 bodies to the Gaza Strip. The identities of the deceased and the cause of death were not immediately known.

Over the course of its nearly 10-month offensive in Gaza, the military has exhumed remains as it searches for the bodies of hostages taken in Hamas' October 7 attack, which ignited the war.

Weam Fares, a spokesperson for the Nasser Hospital in southern Gaza, says 84 bodies were handed over at the Kerem Shalom crossing on Monday and were taken directly for burial. The hospital did not provide further details.

The Israeli military did not respond to a request for comment.

Associated Press reporters saw the bodies being brought to a cemetery in a container truck belonging to a private company. They were buried in a mass grave.

The International Committee of the Red Cross said it was not involved in the transfer.

Meanwhile, The Israeli military said Palestinian militants fired at least 15 projectiles into Israel from Gaza, and first responders say one person was lightly wounded.

TikTok to withdraw rewards feature

AP ■ FRANKFURT

TikTok has agreed to withdraw a rewards feature that raised concerns about its potential to encourage excessive screen time, particularly among children, the European Union's executive commission said Monday.

It was the first resolution of an investigation under the 27-country EU's sweeping Digital Services Act, which went into effect in February and aims to ensure a "safe and accountable online environment" by regulating large digital platforms. TikTok made the commitment without conceding the feature violated the Digital Services Act, officials said.

The commission has however ruled that the withdrawal is legally binding, which "sends a clear message to the entire social media industry," said Margrethe Vestager, European commission for digital affairs.

"Design features on platforms with addictive effects put the well-being of their users at risk," she said in a statement. "That's why we have made TikTok's commitments under the DSA legally binding."

The case involves TikTok Lite, a low-bandwidth version of the app released in Spain and France. It allowed users to earn points for things like following creators, liking content, or inviting friends to join TikTok.

The points could be exchanged for Amazon vouchers and gift cards on PayPal. TikTok said rewards were restricted to users

18 years and older, who had to verify their age. Users could watch up to one hour a day of videos to earn rewards, which were capped at the equivalent of one euro (USD 1.09) a day.

The commission opened an investigation in April due to concerns that TikTok has not done a diligent assessment required under the act of the feature's potential "addictive effect," especially for children. "Given suspected absence of effective age verification mechanisms on TikTok."

Concern over increasing arrests in Venezuela after disputed poll

AP ■ CARACAS

Voices across the globe expressed concern Sunday over the growing number of arrests in Venezuela following last weekend's disputed elections. Pope Francis said Venezuela is "living a critical situation" in his traditional Sunday remarks at the Vatican, adding, "I appeal to all parties to seek the truth, to avoid all kinds of violence."

The remarks came hours after Venezuelan President Nicolás Maduro announced Saturday that the government has arrested 2,000 opponents. At a rally in the Venezuelan capital Caracas, Maduro pledged to detain more people and send them to prison. US Deputy National Security Adviser Jon Finer told CBS program "Face the Nation" Sunday that the Biden administration is worried the arrests could spark wider unrest. "We are concerned about the prospect of instability, should there continue to be these detentions," Finer said. And in a statement, the leaders of several European countries including France, Spain, Germany and Italy said "the rights of all the Venezuelans, especially the political leaders, should be respected during this process. We strongly condemn any arrests or threats against them."

Authorities have declared President Nicolás Maduro the victor in last Sunday's election but have yet to produce voting tallies to prove he won. The opposition claims to have tally sheets showing it won.

An Associated Press analysis Friday of vote tally sheets released by the opposition coalition indicates that their candidate, Edmundo González, won significantly more votes than the government claimed, casting serious doubt on the official declaration that Maduro won. Both González, a former diplomat, and opposition leader María Corina Machado — who was barred by the government from running — have gone into hiding, saying they fear they will be arrested or killed. Maduro and his cadres have threatened to lock them both up. The government arrested hundreds of opposition supporters who took to the streets in the days after the disputed poll. Machado braved the threats to speak at a massive opposition rally Saturday in Caracas, but was whisked away afterwards on the back of a motorcycle. "After six days of brutal repression, they thought they were going to silence us, intimidate or paralyze us," Machado told the rally.

Vietnamese biz tycoon sentenced to 21 yrs for duping stockholders

AP ■ HANOI

A prominent Vietnamese business tycoon was found guilty Monday of defrauding stockholders of nearly USD 150 million by falsely inflating the value of his company, in a case that comes as the government cracks down on widespread corruption in the country.

The Hanoi People's Court sentenced Trinh Van Quyet, 48, to 21 years in prison after a two-week trial that included 49 defendants who were named as accomplices, state-run VN Express reported. He was arrested in 2022.

The billionaire was the chairman and founder of the FLC Group, which owns the discount Bamboo Airways and has broad real estate holdings including hotels, resorts and golf courses, among other assets. According to the indictment, Quyet fraudulently inflated the value of the group's general contractor subsidiary, FLC Faros, by reporting fictitious capital contributions, before taking the company public in 2016.

In the initial public offering, the company sold some 391 million shares to about 30,000 investors, defrauding them of 3.6 trillion Vietnamese dong (about USD 144 million) according to the indictment. Among Quyet's co-defendants were officials from Vietnam's State Securities Commission and State Securities Depository Center, who were accused of being complicit in the scheme by approving and facilitating the initial public offering despite knowing of discrepancies in the figures.

Details on the verdicts for the co-defendants were not immediately released.

Quyet was arrested in 2022, as part of a crackdown on corruption instituted by Vietnamese authorities. The Communist Party's Blazing Furnace campaign began in 2013, but it wasn't until 2018 that authorities began scanning the private sector. Since then, several owners of Vietnam's fast-growing businesses have been arrested. The anti-corruption campaign had been the hallmark of Communist Party General Secretary Nguyen Phu Trong, Vietnam's top politician, who died last month at age 80, three days before Quyet's trial started. The ideologue had called corruption a grave threat to the party and vowed that the campaign would be a "blazing furnace" where no one was untouchable.

China's marriage registrations to fall record low this year

PTI ■ BEIJING

China's marriage registrations in 2024 were set to register a record low since 1980, a demographic expert has warned after the marriage registrations in the first half of this year fell by 4.98 lakhs, heightening the country's looming demographic crisis.

The fall in marriage numbers was expected to add to the declining birth rates, which have been steadily falling over the years amid the rapid rise of the ageing population.

The latest statistics from China's Ministry of Civil Affairs show that 34.3 lakh Chinese couples got married during the first half of 2024, a drop of 4.98 lakh couples compared to the same period from last year, state-run Global Times reported on Monday. It said that 1.27 million couples also got divorced.

He Yafu, an independent demographic expert who tracks marriage registration data, predicted that based on the present trend, the annual figure of marriage registrations in 2024 will drop to a record low since 1980.

The decline in the number of marriage registrations since 2014 was attributed to a decrease in the young population, the gender imbalance with more men than women among the marriageable population, the postponement of the age of first marriage, high costs of getting married, and changing attitudes toward marriage.

He said the continued decline in the number of marriage registrations in 2024 indicates that the number of new-borns will go downward again in 2025.

Due to factors such as the decrease in the young population and low child-birth intentions, the declining trend in China's birth rate, in the long run, will be difficult to fundamentally change unless substantial childbirth support policies are implemented in the future to address this challenge, the report quoted him as saying.

China's population continued to decline as the overall population fell by 20.8 lakh last year to 140.97 crore, down from 141.18 crore in 2022, as India overtook China to become the most populous country in the world in 2023, according to official data released early this year.

China's population reported its first decline in six decades in 2022 after the birth rate hit a new low, resulting in decades of the child policy pursued vigorously by the ruling Communist Party of China (CPC) to control population growth, with experts predicting a steeper decline in the coming years.

Researchers warned that the Chinese economy, which, in the past significantly benefited from a demographic dividend, will have to tackle challenges including fewer working-age people, weaker spending power and a strained social security system as its population ages further.

China's overall population is set to see a steeper decline in the coming years, said Professor Peng Xizhe from the Centre for Population and Development Policy Studies at Fudan University. It's almost certain the population will go on with negative growth, Peng told the Hong Kong-based South China Morning Post early this year.

The demographic crisis was largely attributed to a decades-old one-child policy that was scrapped in 2016, after which China permitted all couples to have two children.

In 2021, China passed a revised Population and Family Planning Law allowing Chinese couples to have three children and announced a number of incentives to encourage people to have more children, in an apparent attempt to address the reluctance of couples to have more kids due to mounting costs.

Starmmer calls emergency meeting

UK PM terms riots 'far-right' thuggery

British Prime Minister Keir Starmer has called an emergency COBRA meeting of senior ministers and police chiefs at 10 Downing Street here on Monday after a weekend of riots across several cities in the country, which he termed a "far-right thuggery" that will face the full force of the law.

Hundreds of arrests have been made as police officers in riot gear responded to violent scenes in Rotherham, Middlesbrough, Bolton and other parts of the UK on Sunday, after days of some of the worst rioting seen on the streets of the country in the wake of the fatal stabbings of three schoolgirls in Southport, north-west England. Hotels housing asylum seekers and mosques have been among the targets of the anti-immigrant mobs after initial false claims spread online regarding the stabbing suspect being an immigrant who arrived in the country illegally.

"I utterly condemn the far-right thuggery we have seen this weekend. Be in no doubt: those who have participated in this violence will face the full force of the law," said Starmer in a statement on Sunday.

"There is no justification - none - for taking this action, and all right-minded people should be condemning this sort of violence. People in this country have a right to be safe and yet, we've seen Muslim communities targeted, attacks on mosques, other minority communities singled out, Nazi salutes in the street, attacks on the police, (and) wanton violence alongside racist rhetoric. So, no, I won't shy away from calling this what it is: far-right thuggery," he said.

He will chair the emergency Cabinet Office Briefing Room A (COBRA) meeting with UK Home Secretary Yvette Cooper to discuss the future course of action to curb the violence. The Home Office has also announced that mosques will be offered greater protection with new "emergency security" that can be rapidly deployed to respond to violent disorder targeting places of worship.

"They do not speak for our communities. It's a total disgrace, and there has to be a reckoning. Those individuals who are involved in the disorder need to know that they will pay a price," said Cooper, as she indicated that additional prosecutors and courts are on standby to charge those being arrested for a series of offences.

"We have made very clear to the police that they have our full support in pursuing the full range of prosecutions and penalties, including the serious prison sentences, long-term tagging, travel bans and more,"

she said.

During clashes over the weekend, cars were set alight, windows smashed, large bins burnt and hurled at officers and stores looted. Masked anti-immigration mobs broke into a hotel housing asylum-seekers in Rotherham, South Yorkshire, and rocks and long pieces of wood were thrown at police officers who lined up in front of the building as they tried to protect it.

"The mindless actions of those today have achieved nothing other than sheer destruction and leaving members of the public and the wider community in fear," said Assistant Chief Constable Lindsey Butterfield of South Yorkshire Police.

Several police officers have suffered injuries as they faced off with the mobs, who are being fuelled by misinformation being spread online. The riots started in Southport, near Liverpool, last week following the stabbing of a group of young children at a Taylor Swift-themed dance class on July 29.

Ties with US should be mended but not at China's cost: Pak PM

PTI ■ LAHORE

Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif has said that Pakistan wants to repair ties with the US but not at the cost of its ties with China as no other country could do what Beijing was doing for his cash-strapped country.

The 72-year-old Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N) leader made these remarks during a meeting with a group of journalists who had recently returned from an official visit to China at his Model Town residence here, according to the Dawn newspaper.

Sharif said that work was progressing fast in the second phase of the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC) and also informed that during the recent visit of Chinese experts to Pakistan, there was positive movement in the promotion of cooperation in different fields.

Asked about the Pakistan-US relations, the prime minister said that the country needed to repair its relations with Washington as that was in its best interests but it shouldn't be at the expense of China. "I think our relations with the US must be repaired, as it is very necessary for Pakistan... But it shouldn't be at the cost of China... and I had told (the Americans) recently in the presence of various dignitaries, including Foreign Minister Ishaq Dar," Sharif was quoted as saying.

"I also told them that similarly, the friendship with China is not at the cost of the US, as both have significance for us," he clarified. Ties between the two countries soured after jailed former prime minister Imran Khan openly accused the US of orchestrating his downfall after he was removed through a vote of no-confidence in April 2022.

Prime Minister Sharif said he believed that whatever China was helping Pakistan to accomplish, the US cannot do. Sharif also spoke about his letter to Beijing requesting a debt re-profiling and said that if China agreed to give Pakistan five to seven years to pay back the loans, the government would be able to bring down inflation, including electricity prices, the Dawn reported. The premier said their request is under consideration and he is hoping for a positive response from China. He also expressed his concern about the safety and security of Chinese nationals in Pakistan and assured that the government would use all its resources to ensure their well-being.

In March, five Chinese nationals were among six people killed when an explosives-packed vehicle rammed into their bus in Pakistan's troubled province of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa. It was the second suicide attack on the personnel working on the China-backed hydropower project since 2021.

The Chinese were working on the Dasu hydropower project, which is about 300 km to the north of Islamabad. The 4,320 MW project is being constructed by the China Gezhouba with funding from the World Bank. Thousands of Chinese personnel are working in Pakistan on several projects being carried out under the aegis of the USD 60 billion China-Pakistan Economic Corridor.

Japan's defence minister begins visits to Cambodia, Vietnam

AP ■ PHNOM PENH

Japan's defence minister held talks with senior officials in Cambodia, a top ally of China, on Monday as he began a Southeast Asian trip that will also take him to Vietnam, whose relations with Beijing are complicated by maritime disputes. Japan has historically maintained warm relations with Cambodia, but its influence is minor compared to that of China, Tokyo's biggest geopolitical rival in Asia, with growing influence throughout Southeast Asia. Tokyo is disturbed by China's aggressive maritime activity, as are several Southeast Asian nations, and seeks to counter Beijing's diplomatic and economic outreach.

Defence Minister Minoru Kihara held talks with his Cambodian counterpart, Tea Seha, as well as with Prime Minister Hun Manet and former Prime Minister Hun Sen, who is now president of the Senate, Defence

Ministry spokesperson Gen. Chhum Sochet said on his Facebook page. He said the two defence ministers vowed to promote cooperation, especially in human resources and exchanges of personnel visits, as spelled out in a 2013 memorandum of understanding.

A separate Defence Ministry statement said the two sides agreed to hold a joint military training course covering disaster rescue operations and to exchange military attachés.

Kihara told reporters before his trip that Japan has been stepping up defence ties with Cambodia and Vietnam in recent years and that he hopes to deepen cooperation.

"Southeast Asian countries are in strategically important areas that are part of Japan's crucial sea lanes," Kihara said. He said Japan has elevated its relations with both Cambodia and Vietnam to the level of comprehensive and strategic partnership.

Kihara said he hoped to share his "understanding of the strategic environment" in the region and reinforce defence and security cooperation with Cambodia and Vietnam.

Kihara's visit coincided with Cambodia's breaking ground on Monday on a controversial China-backed canal linking the capital, Phnom Penh, with the sea, despite environmental concerns and the risk of straining ties with neighbouring Vietnam. The USD 1.7 billion, 180-kilometre Funan Techo canal is to connect Phnom Penh with Kep province on Cambodia's southern coast, giving it access to the Gulf of Thailand. Cambodia hopes the 100-metre-wide, 5.4-metre-deep canal will lower the cost of shipping goods to the country's sole deepwater port, Sihanoukville, and reduce reliance on Vietnamese ports. China has gained outside political and economic influence in Cambodia through aid and investment in major infrastructure projects.

Robert F Kennedy Jr says he left a dead bear in Central Park as a prank

Wilmington (AP): Independent presidential candidate Robert F. Kennedy Jr. once retrieved a bear that was killed by a motorist and left it in New York's Central Park with a bicycle on top, sparking a mystery that consumed the city a decade ago.

Kennedy describes the incident in a video that was posted to social media Sunday, adding it will be included in a forthcoming New Yorker article that he expects to be damaging.

It's the latest bizarre incident in Kennedy's quixotic campaign that has divided his famous family and left Republicans and Democrats alike concerned about his potential impact on the presidential contest. Kennedy has acknowledged a parasite that lodged in his brain and died. He denied eating a dog after a friend shared a photo with Vanity Fair magazine showing Kennedy dramatically preparing to take a bite of a charred animal; Kennedy said it was a goat. In the video, Kennedy recounts the story to actress Roseanne Barr. He says he was heading to a falconry excursion with friends when a woman driving ahead of him hit and killed the young bear with her vehicle. He says he put it in his own vehicle, intending to skin it and eat the meat, but the day got away from him.

Eventually, he says, he was in Manhattan and needed to get the bear carcass out of his vehicle. His friends, fueled by alcohol, concocted the Central Park plan as a prank, he said, adding he was not drunk himself. At the time, bicycle accidents were getting significant media attention, so Kennedy and his friends thought it would be funny to make it look like the bear was hit by a bicycle.

Imran Khan's party on Monday claimed that the former Pakistan prime minister is being given "substandard food" in jail on the orders of Punjab Chief Minister Maryam Nawaz, leading to deterioration in his health and demanding his immediate medical checkup.

The Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) also observed a black day on Monday as it marks a year of the 71-year-old former cricketer-turned-politician's arrest by the National Accountability Bureau in a 190-million pound corruption case. "Imran Khan had said he was being given substandard food in jail which is causing him to feel unwell. All of this is happening on the orders of Maryam Nawaz," PTI senior leader Moonis Elahi wrote on X on Monday.

The former federal minister said only the ruling Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N) could stoop so low.

He further said Khan braved the imprisonment for a year for the rights of the people of Pakistan.

"We salute Khan's steadfastness, courage and bravery. We demand his immediate release in all fake cases against him," Elahi demanded.

"Khan told reporters that due to the intense heat and there being no refrigerator, his food goes stale even before it's cooked. It has caused him food poisoning. Inadequate measures are being taken to keep him safe and healthy," another PTI leader Zulfi Bokhari said.

Former minister Hamad

Azhar said there is a threat to the PTI founder's life. Azhar, who is also the party's general secretary in Punjab, said Khan had already survived an assassination attempt during the party's long march in 2022.

"We demand an immediate medical checkup of Khan. The nation should be informed about his health status. The most popular and towering leader of the Muslim ummah has been deliberately imprisoned in such conditions by petty and fake rulers where his health is deteriorating," Azhar said. On Sunday, Khan refused to apologise for the May 9 riots that erupted after his arrest last year and claimed that it was the Army that owed him an apology since he was "abducted" by the paramilitary rangers on the day of the violence.

Head of Russian military's main congress centre, top official held

AP ■ MOSCOW

The director of the Russian military's main congress centre and a top Defence Ministry official were arrested on Monday on fraud charges, part of a sweeping probe into abuse of office in the top echelons of the country's military leadership.

The Investigative Committee, Russia's top state criminal investigation agency, announced that Vyacheslav Akhmedov, head of the Patriot Park was arrested on charges of fraud. Maj Gen Vladimir Shestero, deputy head of the Defence Ministry's innovations department, was detained along with Akhmedov.

The committee said the two men are suspected of embezzling government funds earmarked for the Patriot Park, a gigantic military exhibition and congress centre just west of Moscow.

The venue, which covers an area of more than 5,400 hectares (over 13,300 acres), has hosted annual army forums, international meetings and displays of Russian weapons since it opened in 2015. Along with conference halls and sprawling exhibition grounds, it includes an air base, a massive firing range and even a huge Orthodox Church.

In 2019, President Vladimir Putin made a donation from his own money to commission the church's main icon, according to the Kremlin.

Their detention follows a series of arrests of senior military officials who were part of an inner circle of Sergei Shoigu, whom Putin dismissed as defence minister soon after his May inauguration for a new term.

Shoigu, who had personal ties with Putin, was given the high-profile post of secretary of Russia's Security Council, but several members of his close entourage lost their jobs and many of them were arrested, including his top associate and deputy, Timur Ivanov, who has been jailed on bribery charges since April.

The former defence minister had been widely criticised for Russia's setbacks on the battlefield in Ukraine and was accused of incompetence and corruption by mercenary leader Yevgeny Prigozhin, who launched a brief mutiny in June 2023 to demand his dismissal.

Antisemitic incidents in Czech Republic rose sharply in 2023

AP ■ PRAGUE

Antisemitic incidents in the Czech Republic sharply increased last year, with their peak appearing in the final quarter of 2023 following the deadly Hamas attacks on Israel on October 7, an assault that triggered the war in Gaza, the country's Jewish community said on Monday.

In its annual report, the Federation of the Jewish Communities said it registered 4,328 antisemitic incidents in 2023, up 90 per cent from 2,277 in the previous year. The report said that 1,800 incidents — or 41.59 per cent, of the total — happened in the last three months of the year.

"The October 7 was immediately followed by a global explosive wave of antisemitism, which also strongly hit the Czech Republic," the report said.

The bulk of the anti-Jewish hatred, 98 per cent, was expressed online, most of them through social media, it said. Those included the publication of false, dehumanizing, demonizing, vulgar and conspiracy theories and stereotypes as well as hatred aimed at the state of Israel. The report, however, concluded the Czech Republic remains a safe country for Jews. It said there was no physical attack registered for the second straight year. But 18 incidents involved antisemitic threats, harassment and verbal insults, more than double than the previous year. The rest of the incidents included demonizing the Jewish community with conspiracy theories and stereotyping, according to the report. The Hamas attacks on Israel killed some 1,200 people, mostly civilians. The militants also took around 250 people hostage.

Chinese-American Nobel Prize-winning physicist Tsung-Dao Lee dies at age 97

AP ■ TAIPEI

Chinese-American physicist Tsung-Dao Lee, who in 1957 became the second-youngest scientist to receive a Nobel Prize, died on Sunday at his home in San Francisco at age 97, according to a Chinese university and a research center. Lee, whose work advanced the understanding of particle physics, was one of the great masters in the field, according to a joint obituary released Monday by the Tsung-Dao Lee Institute at Shanghai Jiao Tong University and the Beijing-based China Center for Advanced Science and Technology.

Lee, a naturalized US citizen since 1962, was also a professor emeritus at Columbia University in New York.

Robert Oppenheimer, known as the father of the atomic bomb, once praised Lee as one of the most brilliant theoretical physicists of the time, whose work showed "remarkable freshness, versatility and style."

Lee was born in Shanghai on November 24, 1926, the third of six children to a merchant father, Tsing-Kong Lee, and a mother, Ming-Chang Chang, who was a devout Catholic, according to local newspaper Wenhui Daily.

He went to high school in Shanghai and attended National Chekiang University in Guizhou province and National Southwest Associated University in Kunming in Yunnan province.

After his sophomore year, he received a scholarship from the Chinese government to attend graduate school in the United States. Between 1946 and 1950, he studied at the University of Chicago under Enrico Fermi, a Nobel laureate in physics.

In the early 1950s, Lee worked at the Yerkes Observatory in Wisconsin, at the University of California at Berkeley and at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, N.J.

His research in elementary particles, statistical mechanics, astrophysics and field theory, among others, was standing out. In 1953, he joined Columbia University as an assistant professor. Three years later, at age 29, he became the youngest-ever full professor there. He developed a model for studying various quantum phenomena known as the "Lee model."

In 1957, Lee was awarded the Nobel Prize in physics together with Chen-Ning Yang for work exploring the symmetry of subatomic particles as they interact with the force that holds atoms together. At 31, Lee was the second-youngest scientist to receive the distinction. He won many other accolades including the Albert Einstein Award in Science, the Galileo Galilei Medal and the G. Bude Medal, as well as honorary doctorates and titles from organizations around the world.

As China became more open to international exchanges in the 1970s, Lee returned to his home country on repeated visits to give lectures and encourage the development of sciences, according to state media.

On Monday, the topic of his death was trending on social media platform Weibo.

Sensex, Nifty nosedive nearly 3% to month low

Amid global equity rout on US growth concerns

PTI ■ MUMBAI

Stock market benchmark indices Sensex and Nifty crashed nearly 3 per cent on Monday following extremely weak trends in global equity markets amid fears of a slowdown in the US economy. The 30-share BSE Sensex plummeted 2,222.55 points or 2.74 per cent to settle at over a month's low of 78,759.40, marking its worst single-day retreat since June 4, 2024. During the day, it tanked 2,686.09 points or 3.31 per cent to 78,295.86. The NSE Nifty slumped 662.10 points or 2.68 per cent to settle at 24,055.60. During the day, it tumbled 824 points or 3.33 per cent to 23,893.70. Nifty also saw its worst single-day fall since June 4, 2024, when markets crashed more than 5 per cent due to general election results. An over 12 per cent plunge in Japan's Nikkei and geopolitical tensions in the Middle East dented market sentiment, analysts said.

In Asian markets, Seoul, Tokyo, Shanghai and Hong Kong settled sharply lower. Japan's benchmark stock index plunged 12.4 per cent on Monday, compounding a global market rout set off by investor concerns that the US economy could be headed for recession. A report on Friday showing hiring by US employers slowed last month by much more than expected convulsed financial markets, vanquishing the euphoria that had taken the Nikkei 225 to all-time highs of over 42,000 in recent weeks. On Monday, the Nikkei closed down 4,451.28 points at 31,458.42. It had dropped 5.8 per cent on Friday, making this its worst two-day decline ever. Its worst single-day rout was a plunge of 3,836 points, or 14.9 per cent, on October 19, 1987, a global markets crash that was dubbed "Black Monday" but proved to be only a temporary setback despite fears it might have augured a worldwide downturn. European markets were also trading with deep cuts. The US markets ended significantly lower on Friday. From the Sensex pack, Tata Motors slumped over 7 per cent. Adani Ports, Tata Steel, SBI, Power Grid, JSW Steel and Maruti were the other big laggards. However, Hindustan Unilever and Nestle ended in positive territory. "The global markets were jolted into a cautious mode by recessionary fears in the US following disappointing job statistics and unwinding of carry trade following the rapid rise of the yen. The effects were felt by the domestic market as well and are expected to impact in the near term," said Vinod Nair, Head of Research, Geojit Financial Services.

Foreign Institutional Investors (FIIs) offloaded equities worth Rs 3,310 crore on Friday, according to exchange data. "The global market is reeling as bears enter with a cocktail of bad news. The fear of a reverse Yen carry trade, following an interest rate hike in Japan, was the initial catalyst. This was compounded by fears of a recession in the US after extremely poor jobs data, which spooked market sentiment," said Santosh Meena, Head of Research, Swastika Investmart Ltd. Global oil benchmark Brent crude declined 1.93 per cent to USD 75.33 a barrel. In the broader market, the BSE smallcap gauge dropped 4.21 per cent and midcap index plummeted 3.60 per cent. Amid widespread selling pressure, the BSE benchmark plunged 1.08 per cent on Friday. The broader Nifty of NSE dropped 1.17 per cent. In two straight sessions to Monday, Nifty and Sensex have corrected nearly 4 per cent.

India's services sector growth eases slightly in July

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

India's services sector growth recorded another month of robust expansion in July, albeit at a slightly slower pace than in June, largely supported by robust demand conditions and investment in technology, a monthly survey said on Monday. The seasonally adjusted HSBC India Services Business Activity Index was at 60.3 in July, down only fractionally from 60.5 in June. In the Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) parlance, a print above 50 means expansion, while a score below 50 denotes contraction. "Service sector activity rose at a slightly slower pace in July, with new business increasing further, primarily driven by domestic demand. Looking ahead, services firms remained optimistic about the outlook for year ahead," Pranjal Bhandari, Chief India Economist at HSBC, said. New export orders increased at the third-strongest pace since the inception of the series in September 2014, amid strengthening demand for Indian services from across the world. Some of the sources of rising export orders mentioned by panellists included Austria, Brazil, China, Japan, Singapore, the Netherlands and the US. Favourable economic conditions and optimistic expectations for output supported recruitment among services firms, the survey said. On the price front, higher wage and material costs continued to push up business expenses, with the overall rate of inflation quickening from June. Stronger cost pressures and positive demand trends contributed to the steepest rise in prices charged for the provision of services for seven years. Looking ahead, services firms remained strongly optimistic about growth prospects. Around 30 per cent of the survey panel forecast greater output volumes in the next 12 months, while only 2 per cent expect a decline. The overall level of sentiment rose since June and was aligned with its long-run average. Anecdotal evidence suggested that confidence in the outlook for demand and sales, alongside improved customer engagement and new enquiries, boosted optimism. Meanwhile, the HSBC India Composite Output Index posted 60.7 in July, down only fractionally from 60.9 in June and above the crucial 50.0 no-change mark for the thirty-six month running. "India's composite PMI recorded another month of robust expansion in July, albeit at a slightly slower pace than in June," Bhandari said.

Rupee tumbles 31 paise to close at all-time low of 84.03 against US dollar

PTI ■ MUMBAI

The rupee slumped 31 paise to settle at an all-time low of 84.03 (provisional) against the US dollar on Monday, following a sell-off in broader global markets amid rising geopolitical tensions in the Middle East and worries over recession in the US. Forex traders said the downfall in the domestic unit came on the heels of a sharp downturn in the Indian equity markets and significant foreign fund outflows. At the interbank foreign exchange market, the local unit opened at 83.78 and touched an intra-day high of 83.76 and a low of 84.03 against the dollar during the session. It finally settled at its fresh record low level of 84.03 (provisional) against the American currency, down 31 paise against its previous close. On Friday, the rupee settled 1 paise higher at 83.72 against the US dollar in a range-bound the rupee, Choudhary added. Traders may take cues from US ISM services PMI data. Investors may watch out for the RBI's monetary policy decision this week. USD/INR spot price is likely to trade in a range of Rs 83.60 to Rs 84.20, Choudhary said. In the domestic equity market, the 30-share BSE Sensex tanked 2,222.55 points, or 2.74 per cent, to settle at 78,759.40 points, and Nifty dropped 662.10 points, or 2.68 per cent, to 24,055.60 points. Meanwhile, the dollar index, which gauges the greenback's strength against a basket of six currencies, dropped 0.65 per cent to 102.54. Brent crude futures, the global oil benchmark, fell 1.91 per cent to USD 75.34 per barrel. Foreign Institutional Investors (FIIs) were net sellers in the capital markets on Friday as they offloaded shares worth Rs 3,310.00 crore, according to exchange data.

Bringing blueberries to Indian market

PNS ■ NEW DELHI

Camposol, Peru's largest blueberry producer joins forces with Walmart-backed Ninjacart, India's leading agri-startup that leverages technology and data to organise the global agriculture ecosystem to bring high-quality blueberries to Indian consumers. Camposol and Ninjacart's strategic partnership is transforming the blueberry market in India through Ninjacart's digital marketplace, tech-enabled supply chain, cutting edge solutions, and a data-driven approach. This collaboration aims to facilitate Camposol's market entry through a curated strategy, utilising Ninjacart's expertise and data systems to drive accelerated growth. Leveraging Ninjacart's extensive network of over 100,000 retailers, the partnership ensures a reliable and consistent supply of high-quality blueberries, benefiting consumers and retailers alike.

Indian economy likely to grow at 7-7.2% in FY25, says Deloitte

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

India's economy is expected to grow at 7-7.2 per cent in the current fiscal year driven by robust economic fundamentals and continuity in domestic policy reforms, Deloitte India said on Monday. The August update of Deloitte's India Economic Outlook said several initiatives in the Union Budget 2024-25 toward improving agriculture productivity, creating jobs for the youth, and in manufacturing and addressing the challenge of access to finance for micro, small, and medium enterprises (MSMEs), would help improve supply-side demand, curb inflation, and prop up consumer spending, especially in rural areas. Deloitte India Economist Rumki Majumdar said, India will witness robust growth in the second half after a period of uncertainty in the first six months of the year. "Key contributing factors include the continuity in domestic policy reforms, reduced uncertainties in the US post-elections, and more synchronous global growth within a low inflation regime. "Additionally, improved global liquidity conditions, as central banks in the West ease their monetary policy stance, will enhance capital flows and drive higher investments, particularly in the private sector," Majumdar said. Observing that strong economic fundamentals would drive GDP growth between 7 per cent and 7.2 per cent in FY25, the Economic Outlook report said effectively addressing the urban-rural consumer spending gaps, inflation, and employment concerns can significantly enhance the affordability of aspirational rural consumers. "The much-desired policy pivot was evident in the Union Budget presented last month. Reducing the urban and rural spending gap in the coming years will ensure sustained consumer demand from a larger consumer base," it added. Deloitte India's growth projection is at par with that of RBI, which projected FY25 growth at 7.2 per cent. It is higher than Finance Ministry's Economic Survey which estimated GDP expansion between 6.5-7 per cent. The Indian economy grew at 8.2 per cent in 2023-24 fiscal year. The report further said despite strong growth, private consumption spending has remained modest over the past five years. The pandemic, high global and domestic inflation, consequent tightening of financial conditions, and the effects of poor agriculture output on rural demand seem to have capped private consumption growth in India. But a Deloitte research showed that India is witnessing distinct and broad-based shifts in consumption patterns. There is a broad-based shift in the composition of consumption towards more non-food and discretionary items, reflecting changing lifestyles and preferences that are here to stay. According to the Household Consumption Expenditure Survey, spending on discretionary goods and services (including conveyance) has gone up both in rural and urban India, with the former quickly catching up in spending on discretionary durable goods (including automobiles, electric and electronic goods) with the latter in just one decade. "Demand for processed food has been among the highest in most states, suggesting a shift towards ready-to-eat options. Rapid urbanization, increasing women's participation in the workforce, and enhanced marketing and availability are driving these changing dietary habits," the report said. According to Deloitte research, if increasing income in states results in a relatively equitable distribution and higher rural spending, businesses can tap into a larger proportion of the state's population that resides in rural areas. This gives businesses access to a large consumer base and a sustainable consumer spending demand, as compared to states with a widening gap.

Sebi amends mutual fund rules to curb front-running, insider trading

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

Capital markets regulator Sebi has amended mutual fund norms requiring Asset Management Companies (AMCs) to put in place an institutional mechanism to identify and deter front-running and insider trading in securities. Additionally, the management of AMCs will be responsible for ensuring the effectiveness of the institutional mechanism. Also, the regulator has directed AMCs to have a whistle-blower mechanism. This came in the wake of Sebi's passing two orders regarding front-running cases involving Axis AMC and Life Insurance Corporation of India (LIC). In a gazette notification dated August 1, Sebi said, "Asset management companies shall put in place an institutional mechanism, as may be specified by the Board, for the identification and deterrence of potential market abuse including front-running and fraudulent transactions in securities". Front-running refers to an illegal practice, where an entity trades based on advanced information from a stock broker or analyst before the information has been made available to clients. As per the notification, the Chief Executive Officer (CEO) or Managing Director (MD) or such other person of equivalent or analogous rank and Chief Compliance Officer of the asset management company will be responsible and accountable for the implementation of such an institutional mechanism. "The asset management company shall establish, implement and maintain a documented whistle-blower policy that shall provide for a confidential channel for employees, directors, trustees, and other stakeholders to raise concerns about suspected fraudulent, unfair or unethical practices, violations of regulatory or legal requirements or governance vulnerability, and establish procedures to ensure adequate protection of the whistleblowers," Sebi said. To give these effects, the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Sebi) has amended mutual fund rules, which will come into force from November 1.

Over ₹177 cr lost on account of ATM/credit card, internet banking frauds

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

As much as Rs 177 crore was lost on account of credit, debit card and internet banking frauds in the 2023-24 fiscal, Parliament was informed on Monday. In a written reply to the Lok Sabha, Minister of State for Finance Pankaj Chaudhary said the amount of loss due to cyber fraud has increased from Rs 69.68 crore in FY23 to Rs 177.05 crore in FY24. The quantum of loss in FY22 was Rs 80.33 crore, it was Rs 50.10 crore in FY21 and Rs 44.22 crore in FY20.

Chaudhary further said to help customers recover the loss on account of fraudulent transactions, the RBI has issued instructions to banks on limiting the liability of customers in cases of unauthorised electronic banking transactions. A customer need not bear any loss if the deficiency is on the part of the bank and in cases, where the fault lies neither with the bank nor with the customer but lies elsewhere in the system and the customer notifies the bank within three working days of receiving the communication about the unauthorised transaction. Where the loss is due to the reports the unauthorised transaction to the bank. Where the fault lies neither with the customer nor with the bank and lies elsewhere in the system, and the customer reports between 4-7 working days of the unauthorised transaction, the maximum liability of the customer ranges from Rs 5,000 to Rs 25,000, depending on the type of account/instrument. If the unauthorised transaction is reported beyond 7 working days, the customer liability shall be determined as per the bank's Board approved policy.

"The burden of proving customer liability in case of unauthorised electronic banking transactions shall lie on the bank," Chaudhary said. To facilitate the citizens to report any cyber incidents, including financial frauds, the Home Ministry has launched a National cybercrime reporting portal (www.Cybercrime.Gov.In) and a National cybercrime Helpline Number '1930'. Further, customers can also report financial fraud on the official customer care website or branches of banks.

RBI proposes regulatory principles for management of model risks in credit

PTI ■ MUMBAI

The Reserve Bank on Monday proposed to lay down principles for management of model risks in credit for banks and other regulated entities with a view to ensuring prudence and robustness. Regulated Entities (REs) generally use various models as part of their credit management, including for credit appraisal, borrower scoring, pricing, and risk management, among others. Inherently, model outputs are exposed to uncertainties as they are based on assumptions which may not manifest in the envisaged ways and may take different forms in a real-world scenario, the RBI said in a draft circular on 'Regulatory Principles for Management of

Model Risks in Credit'. This potentially exposes REs to model risk, which has implications on prudential aspects of credit risk management, compliance and reputational risk. With a view to ensuring prudence and robustness, in the use of such models, RBI proposed to lay down certain broad regulatory principles which should be adopted by REs. "REs shall put in place a detailed Board approved policy with regard to model risk management framework for all models deployed, covering the entire model life cycle," the draft said. The policy should cover details of governance and oversight aspects commensurate with model materiality; processes around model development or selection; and documentation for models deployed. It should also cover independent vetting / ongoing validation or review processes; change control; and the monitoring and reporting framework including role of internal audit function. "Credit risk model" refers to any quantitative method that applies statistical, economic, financial, or mathematical principles and assumptions to process data into an output to be used for credit decisions. The models used by REs may either be developed internally or sourced from external third-party suppliers, including under collaborative lending arrangements, or can be a mix of both as per the provisions of the policy, the draft said.

IndiGo to introduce business class seats in select flights from mid-November

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

IndiGo will introduce business class seats in select flights on 12 domestic routes starting from November 14 and will also launch a customer loyalty programme, as the 18-year-old airline embarks on ambitious business expansion plans. Making the announcement at an event to mark 18 years of flying, IndiGo CEO Pieter Elbers on Monday said the business class seats will be open for booking from August 6 and added that business class passengers will be offered curated special meals.

There will be a total of 12 seats in the configuration of 4 seats in 3 rows in the A321 neo planes. These aircraft will have a total of 220 seats -- 12 business and 208 economy class, according to an official. The seats will be introduced in the select flights from November 14, the official added. The introductory one-way fare for a business class seat will be starting at Rs 18,018. Elbers said the business class seats will be available on busiest and business routes, and will start with Delhi-Mumbai flights. The airline, which is focused on cost leadership, will also be launching the customer loyalty programme 'IndiGo BluChip' which will go live in September. On May 23, IndiGo announced that it will introduce business class in select routes this year. Currently, Tata Group-owned Air India, Air India Express and Vistara offer business class seats. Elbers said the airline will launch flights to seven more international destinations in the current fiscal that ends on March 31, 2025.

INDIA WAITS FOR GOLDEN BOY NEERAJ TO SHINE

PTI ■ PARIS
A man of many firsts in Indian athletics, Neeraj Chopra would be eyeing another piece of history with his javelin when he takes aim at his second Olympics amid expectations of a golden finish yet again. His fabled consistency would be tested after a season that has seen him battle a nagging adductor niggle. He would begin his quest on Tuesday with the qualifications round from where the Haryana lad is expected to make the finals on August 8. A top podium finish will make Chopra only the fifth man in Olympics history to defend his title and the first Indian to win two gold medals in an individual event in the multi-sporting spectacle. Eric Lemming (Sweden; 1908 and 1912), Jonni Myyrä (Finland; 1920 and 1924), Chopra's idol Jan Zelezny (Czech Republic; 1992, 1996 and 2000) and Andreas Thorkildsen (Norway; 2004 and 2008) are the only ones to have defended the men's javelin gold medals in the Olympics. He has competed in just three events this year but the 26-year-old world champion is back in full flow in a season where none of his global competitors have done exceptionally well. After finishing second in the Doha Diamond League in May with a throw of 88.36m, which is his season's best, Chopra withdrew from Ostrava Golden Spike on May 28 as a precautionary measure after he felt "something" in his adductor (group of muscles located on inner thighs). Chopra, who has a personal best of 89.94m, made a strong comeback by winning gold at the Paavo Nurmi Games in Finland on June 18 with a throw of 85.97m. He later opted out of the Paris Diamond League on July 7, insisting that the event was never a part of his competition calendar this year. His coach later dismissed concerns surrounding Chopra's fitness, telling PTI that his adductor has no issues now and his ward has been in high intensity phase of training. One of the most consistent javelin throwers in recent times, Chopra has sent his spear below 85m mark just twice out of his 15 competitions since winning gold in the Tokyo Olympics. Tokyo Olympics silver medalist Czech thrower Jakub Vadlejch, who beat Chopra in the Doha Diamond League, Germany's Julian Weber and former world champion Anderson Peters will once again be the Indian superstar's main rivals. The other Indian in fray in men's javelin is Kishore Jena, who booked an automatic berth with his 87.54m throw in the Asian Games last year, but has struggled to cross the 80m mark after that. Chopra is expected to lift the sagging spirits of the Indian athletics contingent which is yet to register a performance of consequence in the showpiece's ongoing edition.

Triathlon mixed relay goes ahead with swims in the Seine amid water quality concerns

AP ■ PARIS
Olympic triathletes plunged into the Seine River Monday morning as the mixed relay event got underway after organizers said the bacteria levels in the long-polluted Paris waterway were at acceptable levels. The plan to hold the swimming portion of the triathlon and the marathon swimming events in the Seine was an ambitious one. Swimming in the river has, with some exceptions, been off-limits since 1923 because it has been too toxic. Representatives from World Triathlon and the International Olympic Committee along with Paris Games organizers and regional and weather authorities met Sunday night to review water tests. The results indicated the water quality at the triathlon site had improved over the preceding hours and would be within the limits mandated by World Triathlon by Monday morning, they said in a statement. In a very close sprint finish, the team from Germany won the gold medal, with the United States taking silver and Britain clinching bronze. The decision to allow the event to go forward with swims in the Seine came after Belgium's Olympic committee announced Sunday that it would withdraw its team from the mixed relay triathlon after one of its competitors who swam in the river last week fell ill. It was not clear whether her illness had anything to do with her swim in the Seine. Paris spent 1.4 billion euros ($1.5 billion) on infrastructure improvements to clean up the river that flows through its center. That included the construction of a giant basin to capture excess rainwater and keep wastewater from flowing into the river, renovating sewer infrastructure and upgrading wastewater treatment plants. Heavy rains that have fallen off and on during the Games have caused headaches for organizers as they result in elevated levels of fecal bacteria, including E. coli and enterococci, flowing into the river. Drenching rains fell Thursday night, but conditions had otherwise been dry except for light rain Saturday evening. The sun shone brightly as the race unfolded Monday and athletes said organizers reassured them that there were no concerns with water quality. Organizers have continued to express confidence that warm temperatures and the sun's ultraviolet rays would combine to kill enough of the germs ahead of each event set to include a swim in the Seine. Athletes swam in the river for the men's and women's individual triathlons Wednesday, though the men's race had been delayed by a day because of the water quality. Elevated bacteria levels in the waterway have caused cancellations of the swimming portion of training sessions for the relay event. American triathlete Taylor Spivey said the uncertainty was difficult. "I mean, everyone watching can see what an incredible venue this was for, for the triathlon," she said, noting that organizers clearly chose the course location for the backdrop of Paris monuments, which included the Eiffel Tower and the Champs-Élysées. "But the constant question of the water quality, the water quality and the current, was very stressful for the athletes, I would say, because there the contingency plan was only to push the race back, not necessarily like a plan B location." Her teammate, Morgan Pearson, said the last-minute changes in plans were unfair to the athletes and fans. He also was tired of talking about the water quality in the Seine: "I've been getting asked this question for the last year. I qualified a year ago, and I think, no pun intended, we're all just a little bit sick of the question." Brazilian triathlete Arnold Djenyfer said the water was fine Monday. "There was really no difference about the quality of the water today compared to the first race," he said. "We already knew what we were going to face and it was all fine." Vette Bergsvik Thorn of Norway, who competed Monday, was one of several triathletes who fell ill after swimming in the Seine last Wednesday. He said he had a bad stomach illness for about 12 hours but said "it's hard to say if it's the river or just some ordinary food poisoning." "It's been quite a few stressful days with not knowing if we can swim or not," he said. Swiss officials announced Saturday that triathlete Adrien Briffod, who had competed in the Seine on Wednesday, would not compete Monday after falling ill with a stomach infection. On Sunday, they announced that Simon Westermann, who had been tapped to replace Briffod, also had to withdraw because of a gastrointestinal infection. Westermann had not participated in any swims in the Seine.

Motivated India eye German scalp to script another historic chapter in men's hockey

PTI ■ PARIS
Having displayed nerves of steel to be within touching distance of a second successive Olympic medal, the Indian hockey team will fancy its chances against familiar foe and reigning world champion Germany in the semifinal of the ongoing Games, hoping to better the bronze that it claimed in the Tokyo edition. India won last of their eight Olympic gold medals way back in the 1980 Moscow Games. Paris provides them a great opportunity to make history. A semifinal win will ensure a silver for India, which they last won in the 1960 Rome edition. The Indians displayed a tenacious performance against Britain in the quarterfinal at the iconic Yves-du-Manoir Stadium on Sunday. Playing with 10 men for close to 40 minutes after Amit Rohidas was shown a red card for unintentionally hitting rival forward Will Calnan on his face, the Harmanpreet Singh-led side defended stoutly to hold Britain 1-1 in regulation time and force a shoot-out, where it emerged 4-2 winner. Veteran goalkeeper P R Sreejesh, playing his last international tournament, seemed to have saved his best for the last leg of his career as he made save after save, including two in the shoot-out, to seal India's second consecutive Olympic semifinal spot. It was one of the bravest performances from the Indians as in modern day hockey, to play and win with a man down is a Herculean task. And come Tuesday, Harmanpreet and his men would not only look to better the colour of their Tokyo medal but would also want to give a befitting farewell gift to the talismanic Sreejesh who will walk into the sunset after the Paris Games. Nicknamed 'The Great Wall of Indian hockey', Sreejesh has been phenomenal in the Games so far, standing like a warrior in front of the post and enjoying every moment of his last hurrah at the Olympics. Against Britain, Sreejesh made 10 spectacular saves from field shots. If that was not enough, he kept out 10 penalty corners. "When I stepped on this field today (Sunday), there were two options for me. This can be my last match, or I got an opportunity for two more matches and I think, yeah, I got two more matches now," Sreejesh said later. "See, whoever comes in the semis, we (will) just play our game. That's it, that's important, because now it's a different game, because we are one man down and we need to focus on that now." But it won't be easy for the Indians as key defender and first rusher Amit Rohidas has been suspended from the semifinal match after receiving a contentious red card against Britain, a decision which Hockey India has appealed. Rohidas' absence will also weaken India's options from penalty corners as he has been second to Harmanpreet from set pieces and the entire responsibility will now rest on the skipper. "Now, these things are not in our control. While it is a setback to not have Amit on the pitch for the semis, we are focused on the task at hand," said Harmanpreet, who has been India's leading scorer at the Games with seven goals. "On Sunday, what stood out in our performance was the team's ability to take on the added responsibility of a key position that Amit played. Every player stepped up and even until the last minute, we were fighting back." Going by world ranking and recent head-to-head record, there is hardly anything to differentiate between current world champions and four-time Olympic gold medalists Germany from India. While Germany are ranked fourth in the world, the Indians are a rung below. Germany, who beat Argentina 3-2 in the quarterfinal, are familiar opponents for India in high-stakes tournaments, the most famous being the bronze medal match in Tokyo where India registered a thrilling 5-4 win, thanks a stunning last-second save by Sreejesh. In the days leading up to the Paris Games, India had played Germany in practice matches and the Harmanpreet-led side won five out of those six contests. India's most recent contests against Germany were in the FIH Pro League's London leg in June this year, where they defeated the Honamas 3-0 before losing 2-3 in the return tie. "We wanted to play Germany in the final. At least, that was what we had discussed amongst ourselves during team meetings ahead of the Olympic Games.

Pregnant Olympians push boundaries of possibility in Paris

AP ■ PARIS
Many Olympic athletes take to Instagram to share news of their exploits, trials, victories and heartbreaks. After her fencing event ended last week, Egypt's Nada Hafez shared a little bit more. She'd been fencing for two, the athlete revealed - and in fact had been pregnant for seven months. "What appears to you as two players on the podium, they were actually three!" Hafez wrote, under an emotional picture of her during the match. "It was me, my competitor, & my yet-to-come to our world, little baby!" Mom (and baby) finished the competition ranked 16th, Hafez's best result in three Olympics. A day later, an Azerbaijani archer was also revealed on Instagram after having competed while six-and-a-half months pregnant. Yaylagul Ramazanova told Xinhua News she'd felt her baby kick before she took a shot - and then shot a 10, the maximum number of points. There have been pregnant Olympians and Paralympians before, though the phenomenon is rare for obvious reasons. Still, most stories have been of athletes competing when they're far earlier in their pregnancies - or not even far enough along to know they were expecting. Like U.S. Beach volleyball star Kerri Walsh Jennings, who won her third gold medal while, unknowingly, five weeks pregnant with her third child. "When I was throwing my body around fearlessly, and going for gold for our country, I was pregnant," she said on "Today" after the London Games in 2012. She and husband Casey (also a beach volleyball player) had only started trying to conceive right before the Olympics, she said, figuring it would take time. But she felt different, and volleyball partner Misty May-Treanor said to her - presciently, it turned out - "You're probably pregnant." It makes sense that pregnant athletes are pushing boundaries now, one expert says, as both attitudes and knowledge develop about what women can do deep into pregnancy. "This is something we're seeing more and more of," says Dr. Kathryn Ackerman, a sports medicine physician and co-chair of the U.S. Olympic and Paralympic Committee's women's health task force, "as women are dispelling the myth that you can't exercise at a high level when you're pregnant." Ackerman notes there's been little data, and so past decisions on the matter have often been arbitrary. But, she says, "doctors now recommend that if an athlete is in good condition going into pregnancy, and there are no complications, then it's safe to work out, train, and compete at a very high level." An exception, she says, might be something like ski racing, where the risk of a bad fall is great. But in fencing, says the Boston-based Ackerman, there is clearly protective padding for athletes, and in less physically strenuous sports like archery or shooting, there's absolutely no reason a woman can't compete. It's not just an issue of physical fitness, of course. It is deeply emotional. Deciding whether and how to compete while trying to also grow a family is a thorny calculus that male athletes simply don't have to consider - at least in anywhere near the same way. Just ask Serena Williams, who famously won the Australian Open in 2017 while pregnant with her first child. When, some five years later, she wanted to try for a second, she stepped back from tennis - an excruciating decision. "Believe me, I never wanted to have to choose between tennis and a family," Williams - who won four Olympic golds - wrote in a Vogue essay. "I don't think it's fair. If I were a guy, I wouldn't be writing this because I'd be out there playing and winning while my wife was doing the physical labor of expanding our family. Maybe I'd be more of a Tom Brady if I had that opportunity." Williams welcomed Adira River Ohanian in 2023, joining older sister Olympia. And Olympia was the name that U.S. softball player Michele Granger's mother reportedly suggested for the baby Granger was carrying when she pitched the gold-medal winning game in Atlanta in 1996. Her husband suggested the name Athena. Granger preferred neither. "I didn't want to make that connection with her name," said Granger to Gold Country Media in 2011. The baby was named Kady.

Boxer Imane calls for end to bullying after backlash over gender misconceptions

AP ■ PARIS
Olympic boxer Imane Khelif said the wave of hateful scrutiny she has faced over misconceptions about her gender "harms human dignity," and she called for an end to bullying athletes after being greatly affected by the international backlash against her. The Algerian athlete spoke about her tumultuous Olympic experience on Sunday night in an interview with SNTV, a sports video partner of The Associated Press. "I send a message to all the people of the world to uphold the Olympic principles and the Olympic Charter, to refrain from bullying all athletes, because this has effects, massive effects," Khelif said in Arabic. "It can destroy people, it can kill people's thoughts, spirit and mind. It can divide people. And because of that, I ask them to refrain from bullying." The victories of Khelif and fellow boxer Lin Yu-ting of Taiwan in the ring in Paris have become one of the biggest stories of the Paris Games. Both women have clinched their first Olympic medals even as they have faced online abuse based on unsubstantiated claims about their gender, drawing them into a wider divide over changing attitudes toward gender identity and regulations in sports. The 25-year-old Khelif acknowledged the pressure and pain of enduring this ordeal while competing far from home in the most important event of her athletic career. "I am in contact with my family two days a week. I hope that they weren't affected deeply," she said. "They are worried about me. God willing, this crisis will culminate in a gold medal, and that would be the best response." The vitriol stems from claims by the International Boxing Association, which has been permanently banned from the Olympics, that both Khelif and Lin failed unspecified eligibility tests for the women's competition at last year's world championships. Khelif declined to answer when asked whether she had undergone tests other than doping tests, saying she didn't want to talk about it. She expressed gratitude to the International Olympic Committee and its president, Thomas Bach, for standing resolutely behind her while the banned former governing body of Olympic boxing stoked a furor around her participation in Paris. "I know that the Olympic Committee has done me justice, and I am happy with this remedy because it shows the truth," she said. She also has seen massive support at her bouts, drawing cheers when she enters the arena and crowds waving Algerian flags chanting her first name. She will fight again Tuesday in the women's 66-kilogram semifinals at Roland Garros. Khelif repeatedly made clear she won't allow chatter or accusations to deter her from attempting to claim Algeria's first Olympic gold medal in women's boxing. "I don't care about anyone's opinion," Khelif said a day after beating Anna Luca Hamori of Hungary. "I came here for a medal, and to compete for a medal. I will certainly be competing to improve (and) be better, and God willing, I will improve, like every other athlete." Although she is aware of the worldwide discussion about her, Khelif said she has been somewhat removed. "Honestly, I don't follow social media," she said. "There is a mental health team that doesn't let us follow social media, especially in the Olympic Games, whether me or other athletes. I'm here to compete and get a good result." Khelif started her Olympic run last Thursday with a victory over Angela Carini of Italy, who abandoned the bout after just 46 seconds. Carini later said she regretted her decision and wished to apologize to Khelif. That unusual ending raised the chatter around Khelif into a roar, drawing comments from the likes of former U.S. President Donald Trump, "Harry Potter" writer J.K. Rowling and others falsely claiming Khelif was a man or transgender. The IOC repeatedly declared her and Lin qualified to participate in the Olympics, and it has decided the murky testing standards and untransparent governance of the IBA, which was banished entirely from the Olympics last year in an unprecedented punishment for a governing body. Khelif clearly felt the weight of the worldwide scrutiny upon her, and her victory over Hamori on Saturday appeared to be cathartic. After the referee raised Khelif's hand with the win, she went to the center of the ring, waved to her fans, knelt and slammed her palm on the canvas, her smile turning to tears. "I couldn't control my nerves," Khelif said in the interview. "Because after the media frenzy and after the victory, there was a mix of joy and at the same time, I was greatly affected, because honestly, it wasn't an easy thing to go through at all. It was something that harms human dignity." She had competed in IBA events for several years without problems until she was abruptly suspended from last year's world championships. The Russian-dominated body - which has faced years of clashes with the IOC - has refused to provide any information about the tests.

Algeria's national boxing federation is still an IBA member. Khelif is from rural northwestern Algeria, and she grew up playing soccer until she fell in love with boxing. Overcoming her father's initial objections, she traveled 10 kilometers (about 6 miles) by bus to train for fights in a neighboring town. After reaching the sport's top level in her late teens, she struggled early in her career before reaching an elite level. Khelif has been a solid, if unspectacular, international competitor for six years, and she lost to eventual gold medalist Kellie Harrington of Ireland at the Tokyo Olympics. Khelif's next bout in Paris is against Janjaem Suwannapheng of Thailand. If Khelif wins again, she will fight for a gold medal Friday. "Yes, this issue involves the dignity and honor of every woman and female," she told an Algerian broadcaster in brief remarks Sunday after beating Hamori. "The Arab population has known me for years and has seen me box in the IBA that wronged me (and) treated me unfairly, but I have God on my side."

WITH SO MUCH SPIN ON OFFER, GAME CAN TURN ON ITS HEAD: INDIA ASSISTANT COACH NAYAR

PTI ■ COLOMBO

“Was it a shock? I would say yes,” said India’s assistant coach Abhishek Nayar as he tried to make sense of the unexpected defeat to Sri Lanka in the second ODI, blaming it on the spin-friendly conditions that have the potential to completely alter the course of a match.

India’s fragility against spin was once again on display as leg-spinner Jeffrey Vandersay wreaked havoc with a six-wicket haul to hand the visitors a 32-run defeat in the second ODI here on Sunday.

“...There is a surprise. But you anticipate and understand that in these conditions the game can turn on its head because there is so much spin on offer,” Nayar said at the post-match press conference.

India were chasing 241 on a pitch that had plenty of assistance for the spinners, and they ended up at 208 all out in 42.2 overs. In the previous game as well, the Indian batters barring skipper Rohit Sharma had struggled. “Even if you look at the last game, it was relatively easy to score against the new ball. As the ball got older, the conditions when batting second got slightly tougher. Sometimes in tough conditions, especially in the 50-over format, this happens,” he added. The assistant coach said the think-tank will reflect on what has gone wrong so far. “We want to go back and understand, and rectify, why it happened twice in a row. The day before yesterday, we were able to stitch partnerships but today we lost quite a few wickets in a bundle.” India shuffled their middle order, promoting Shivam Dube (0) to the number four spot, while maintaining the right-left batting combination with Shreyas Iyer (7) and KL Rahul (0) at numbers six and seven, respectively.

“My belief is that in any sport, position only matters if you’re playing in different areas of a game. We lost wickets in the middle phase, and that’s where the middle order batters batted. It’s not as if middle order batters batted towards the end. “The thought process was right. When it doesn’t work out, these questions are asked often. But I’ve always believed that if a middle order batter bats as a decision,” Nayar said. Nayar feels there is more pressure on the team batting second. “When you are batting first, there is less pressure. When you are chasing, the pressure is more because you have to keep an eye on the run rate, wickets. “Whenever you bat first, you often have partnerships. Wellalage batted really well, both in the last game and this game. They scored important runs in the lower order.”

Dinesh Karthik appointed SA20 league ambassador

PTI ■ JOHANNESBURG

Former India wicketkeeper Dinesh Karthik was on Monday appointed the league ambassador of the SA20 League. Karthik, who is the first Indian player to be associated with the South African tournament, retired from all forms of cricket earlier this year. “The league has been electric in the first two seasons with some of the world’s best players on show and exciting young talent putting up their hands on the global stage,” Karthik was quoted as saying in a media release. “Karthik will be working very closely with fellow SA20 ambassador AB de Villiers and the management team to help strengthen the league’s global fan base and reinforce brand awareness across key strategic markets in India and the United Kingdom,” the release added. Former South Africa captain and league commissioner

Graeme Smith expressed, “His exceptional cricketing talent and personality make him the perfect fit for our league and his involvement will undoubtedly elevate the league’s status globally and in India.” The SA20 comprises six franchises -- MI Cape Town, Joburg Super Kings, Durban Super Giants, Paarl Royals, Pretoria Capitals, Sunrisers Eastern Cape, all of which are owned by the owners of IPL teams.

Former England batter Graham Thorpe dies at 55

PTI ■ LONDON

Former England and Surrey batter Graham Thorpe has died aged 55 after battling a “serious illness” since 2022, the country’s cricket board announced on Monday. Considered one of the finest batters of his generation, Thorpe was hospitalised shortly after being named the head coach of Afghanistan in 2022 but the details of his medical condition are not known. He is survived by his wife Amanda and four children, Henry, Amelia, Kitty and Emma. “It is with great sadness that the ECB shares the news that Graham Thorpe, MBE, has passed away,” ECB said in a statement, without giving the exact cause of his death. “There seem to be no appropriate words to describe the deep shock we feel at Graham’s death. More than one of England’s finest ever batters, he was a beloved member of the cricket family and revered by fans all over the world,” the statement read. Thorpe began his Test career in 1993 with an Ashes century and repeated the feat on the return tour, in Perth in February 1995. The left-hander was also instrumental in England’s back-to-back series wins in Pakistan and Sri Lanka during the 2000-01 season. A lynch-pin of England’s middle order, he went on to play 100 Tests for England between 1993 and 2005 and averaged 44.66 with 16 centuries. He also represented the Three Lions in 82 ODIs, collecting 2830 runs at an average of 37.18. Thorpe enjoyed success at the county level as well. He was picked at the under-11 level by Surrey and played for them for 17 years, scoring close to 20,000 runs for the team. “Graham is one of the great sons of Surrey and there is an overwhelming sadness that he will not walk through the gates of the Oval again. He is a legend of Surrey and brought great pride to the Club wearing both the Three Feathers and the Three Lions. “He made outstanding contributions to the Club as a cricketer, and as a man, and he will be so sorely missed,” said Oli Slipper, Chair at Surrey CCC.

From ‘monkey boy’ to ‘horse guy’, Stephen is soaking up in limelight

AP ■ PARIS

Stephen Nedorosik is gleaming into his newfound stardom as a geeky, bespectacled, Rubik’s Cube-solving video gamer who just won two bronze medals at the Paris Olympics. “It’s still just surreal to me. I wake up in the morning, I’m like, Oh my gosh, I’m a two-time Olympic medalist! It is so cool,” he told The Associated Press. With both medals hanging around his neck, he beamed and laughed as he marveled at his rise to fame and the attention his speciality in gymnastics is receiving. The 25-year-old U.S. Gymnast finished third in the pommel horse on Saturday, five days after helping the American men’s team earn bronze - its first Olympic medal in 16 years. Along the way, he’s captured the hearts of Olympics viewers with his endearing personality and nerdy tendencies. Images and clips of Nedorosik removing his glasses and centering himself before hopping on the pommel horse for a focused routine have gone viral. The memes and tweets have likened him to Clark Kent taking off his glasses and transforming into a hero. “The memes are hilarious and I’m loving them all,” he said. Internet fodder aside, Nedorosik and his eyeglasses have brought visibility to an eye condition called coloboma, which occurs when part of the tissue that makes up the eye is missing. Fans have approached him thanking him for being a role model for children who need to wear glasses. “Even just last week, for the first time, I met someone else who has the same eye condition as me,” Nedorosik said - a young boy whose mother said he really wanted to meet the gymnast. “It was also my first time meeting someone outside my family that has that disease. That was so cool to see that. And, you know, he was just so happy.”

Great Scottie! Scheffler gets Olympic gold medal in thriller

AP ■ SAINT-QUENTIN-EN-YVELINES (FRANCE)

Scottie Scheffler was a model of calm and greatness as he delivered the greatest closing round of his career. The final two hours were about charges and collapses, pure theater that ended Sunday with the Olympic gold medal fittingly draped around the neck of golf’s No. 1 player. It was only when Scheffler stood on the top podium, when the final few bars of the national anthem belted out across Le Golf National, that he lost control. The medal dangling beneath his right hand fixed across his chest, Scheffler raised his left arm to cover the sob. Tears are nothing new for Scheffler. His latest trophy brought out his very best. Four shots behind to start the final round, six shots behind early on the back nine, Scheffler birdied five of six holes down the stretch and matched the course record with a 9-under 62 for a one-shot victory over Tommy Fleetwood. “It’s been a long week. It’s been a challenging week. I played some great golf today, and I’m proud to be going home with a medal,” Scheffler said. “These guys played tremendous golf and I think we should all be proud of the golf that we played this week.” It was a show-stopper, the best of the three men’s competitions since golf returned to the Olympic program in 2016 before 30,000 spectators that got their euros’ worth. The remarkable surge by Scheffler, who shot 29 on the back nine. The relentless play of Fleetwood (66) and Hideki Matsuyama, who had birdie chances on the final six holes and had to settle for pars for a 65 to win the bronze. And there was a stunning collapse by Jon Rahm, who saw a four-shot lead disappear in two holes and his hopes vanish with a double bogey; by Rory McIlroy, one shot behind until hitting wedge into the water; and by Xander Schauffele, the PGA and British Open champion who had a chance to win another gold until playing a four-hole stretch in 4-over par. Not to be overlooked was Victor Perez of France, who hit the opening tee shot on Thursday and came within one shot of a medal on Sunday. He should know the lyrics to “La Marseillaise” if he didn’t already. Fans serenaded him on just about every tee.

High jumper Yaroslava wins Ukraine’s 1st individual gold of Paris Olympics

AP ■ SAINT-DENIS (FRANCE)

It was a night for war-torn Ukraine to rejoice. Thousands of Ukrainians watched on YouTube as high jumper Yaroslava Mahuchikh won gold for the country she was forced to flee, then celebrated with two teammates who also medaled at the Paris Olympics on Sunday. Iryna Gerashchenko shared bronze in the high jump and Mykhaylo Kokhan then claimed a bronze in the hammer throw, too - doubling Ukraine’s Olympic medal haul from three to six in the span of about an hour. “Medals are very important for Ukraine because the people are having a very happy time, and they can cheer us and they can celebrate this with us and not think about the war for one day,” Kokhan said. Mahuchikh, who left her home due to the war with Russia, earned Ukraine’s first individual gold of these Summer Games, following a victory in women’s team saber fencing on Saturday. She is from Dnipro, a city of nearly 1 million located only about 100 kilometers (60 miles) from the front lines of the war. When Russia invaded, she piled as much as she could into her car and left town quickly. On her way out, she heard gunfire and could, at times, see shells raining down miles away. The next time she returns, it will be as an Olympic champion. Once the medals were assured, Mahuchikh and Gerashchenko ran down the track waving Ukrainian flags, prompting a standing ovation at the Stade de France. Then, when the two high jumpers were given special permission to run over and embrace Kokhan, all three Ukrainian medalists posed together with their blue and yellow flags. It wasn’t all about celebrating, though. Mahuchikh also recalled the “almost 500 sportsman (who) died in this war. “They will never compete. They will never celebrate. They will never feel this atmosphere,” she said, adding that her gold medal is “really for all of them.” Mahuchikh succeeds Tokyo gold medalist Maria Lasitskene, a Russian who - along with everyone else from her country - has been banned from track and field’s international events since the country invaded Ukraine.

Boxer Cindy becomes first athlete competing as refugee to clinch Olympic medal

AP ■ VILLEPINTE (FRANCE)

Boxer Cindy Ngamba made history by becoming the first athlete competing as a refugee to clinch an Olympic medal. The 25-year-old originally from Cameroon offered hope for the Refugee Olympic Team that was created to call attention to the plight of refugees across the world. Ngamba’s victory at the Paris Games comes after a fierce bout with French boxer Davina Michel in the women’s 75-kilogram quarterfinals in front of a passionate French crowd. Ngamba, who screamed and pumped her fist when she won, has scored at least a bronze medal as she advances to the semifinals Friday night. She will face Atheyna Bylon, who ensured that Panama would get its fourth-ever Olympic medal with her own win shortly after Ngamba’s fight. “It means the world to me to be the first ever refugee to win a medal,” Ngamba told reporters. “I want to say to all the refugees around the world ... Keep on working hard, keep on believing in yourself.” She was a flag bearer for the 37 athletes making up the biggest Refugee Olympic Team since the idea was born ahead of the 2016 Summer Games in Rio de Janeiro. The International Olympic Committee created the team as a way for displaced athletes and migrants to participate fully in the Olympics without help from national federations. Ngamba moved to the United Kingdom at the age of 11 and said she was granted refugee status in 2021 because she could have been imprisoned for being gay in Cameroon. She has said boxing has been her escape from the chaos - it’s also lifted her up to the international stage. She told reporters Sunday that she struggled when she first moved to the U.K., going from a bubbly kid in Cameroon to an introvert as she learned English and adapted to her new home. She said she found her home in boxing and on the Olympic team. “I had my family and my team by my side every day,” she said. “The refugee team welcomed me with open arms.” Ngamba, who upset former world champion Tammara Thibeault of Canada in her first bout, entered her Sunday match aggressively against Michel, quickly dodging the French boxer’s swipes. Michel received deafening cheers from French fans, while Ngamba said she heard boos in North Paris Arena. “I think I only listened to boos as I walked into the ring,” Ngamba said, adding that the spectators were just another group of people who didn’t believe in her throughout her journey to get where she is today. While some of the athletes on the refugee team have already won Olympic medals for their countries in past Games, Ngamba has been seen as the team’s best chance at medaling in Paris. The success of Ngamba and other athletes on the refugee team comes at a time of record migration and as 100 million people around the world have been forcibly displaced from their homes. The Refugee Olympic Team has nearly quadrupled in size since its debut. The team is “a symbol of inclusion, of equality, of achievement for a large community around the world of refugees and displaced people,” U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees Filippo Grandi told the AP in an interview last week. Grandi congratulated Ngamba, writing on X: “You do us all very, very proud! And now onward to gold.” The refugee team was among the first Olympic delegations to cruise along the Seine River in the opening ceremony last week. Ngamba’s victory comes as women’s boxing has drawn intense scrutiny in recent days as fighters Lin Yu-ting of Taiwan and Imane Khelif of Algeria faced a cascade of online abuse, with comments falsely describing them as transgender or men. Both boxers won their fights this weekend as the IOC backed both women and warned against turning the competition into a “witch hunt.” Looking forward to her next match, Ngamba wants to keep sending a message of hope to refugees everywhere, saying that while she’s got at least a bronze medal locked down, she’s going for gold. “Hopefully in the next round, I will get the job done - not hopefully.”
