consider rescheduling of mayoral polls and Haryana High Court Saturday asked the Chandigarh administration to consider rescheduling of the mayoral polls while taking up a petition challenging the order of post-poning elections to February 6.

The division bench of Justices Sudhir Singh and Harsh Bunger also issued notices to the Union Territory administration, Chandigarh Municipal Corporation and police for filling their replies on January 23. The matter came up for hearing on the petition filed by AAP councillor Kuldeep Kumar, who had challenged the UT administration's order to postpone the mayoral polls to February 6.

Advocate Ferry Sofat, one of the counsels for the petitioner, said during the hearing, the court asked the Chandigarh administration to consider rescheduling of the polls. The court orally asked the UT administration to come up with a next date for holding the mayoral polls between January 23 and January 26, said Sofat.

Sofat further said when the counsel for the Chandigarh administration mentioned the law and order issue for deferring the polls, the court suggested if the Chandigarh police could not handle the law and order for the mayoral polls, then a central agency could be roped in. During the hearing, the court was apprised about the programmes taking place in the city in the wake of the consecration ceremony at the Ram Temple in Ayodhya on January 22 by the counsel for the administration. Thereafter, police would be busy in the arrangement of the Republic

Day celebrations, it was also submitted. The petitioner's counsel during the hearing submitted that the Chandigarh Deputy Commissioner has no authority to defer the polls. Senior advocate Chetan Mittal, representing the Municipal Corporation, however, contended that the DC, who is the prescribed authority, has the power to postpone the elec-Petitioner Kumar, who was the candidate for the mayor post, had sought that the January 18 order of the DC be set aside and elections should be conducted forthwith. On Thursday, the AAP had moved the high court after the Chandigarh mayoral polls were abruptly postponed with councillors being told that the presiding officer had fallen ill.

During the hearing Thursday evening, the counsel for the Chandigarh adminis-tration informed the high court that February 6 had been fixed as the next date for the mayoral polls after assessing the law and order situation. The petitioner had also sought quashing the order of the municipal corporation authorities restricting the entry of councillors in the MC premises.

The petitioner had demanded the holding of the mayoral polls in a fair and free manner. The mayoral polls, which were slated to take place on Thursday, were deferred till further orders after presiding officer Anil Masih fell sick. The Congress and the AAP, which have joined hands for the mayoral polls, have slammed the BJP, accusing it of not deferring elections apprehending its "imminent defeat". (Agencies)

UNVEILED EYES OF RAM DRAW IRE

BISWAJEET BANERJEE AYODHYA

The chief priest of the Ram Lalla temple, Satyendra Das, has raised concerns about the appearance of pictures depicting the idol of Ram Lalla with uncovered eyes. Das said this is a violation of Hindu rituals, emphasising the need for an enquiry to identify and penalise the individual responsible for unveiling the eyes.

In explaining his stance, the chief priest outlined the customary procedure of installing the idol, which includes covering its eyes to maintain a veil until the consecration ceremony, known as Praan Pratisthaa. "The sanctum sanctorum is the designated space for this sacred installation. This is the only place where the eyes should be uncovered by removing the cloth," Das said. While admitting uncertainty about the authenticity of the images circulating newspapers and on channels, Das asserted that any depiction of the idol with open eyes before the Praan Pratisthaa ceremony is inaccurate, as the idol assumes that form only during the consecration ritual. "Expressing concern over the situation, the chief priest remarked, "If someone has removed the cloth from the eyes, then it should be

rienced players, apparent Linconsistency in tempo, and inability to address long-standing weaknesses — there would be plenty to ponder for the Indian women's hockey team when it gets down to the arduous task of rebuilding for the next Olympic cycle after the shocking failure to qualify for

The 0-1 loss to Japan in the third-place match of the FIH Olympic Qualifiers here on Friday can seem stunning on the face of it but dig just a little bit deeper and it would be apparent that the debacle was a long time coming.

Skipper Savita Punia and her teammates had tears rolling down their dejected faces and all one could see in their eyes was uncertainty, perhaps a hint of fear too as to what awaits them

"I don't know," said the team's very shaken coach Janneke Schopman unable to articulate what the future holds for either her or her wards.

Hockey India has ruled out any drastic measures and quite frankly with an Olympic cycle lost, what would any drastic measure achieve at this point? The rebuilding process, after all, has to be a carefully thought out Having qualified for two consecutive Olympics in 2016 and 2020 after efforts of more than three decades, the Indian women made gradual progress at the world level.

The big moment under the sun was of course the Tokyo Olympics. There was no medal but the side's gallantry in a campaign that fetched it the fourth spot won over the nation, which decided that these women deserved to be feted as much as those who came back with a medal around their necks.

So, what changed in a matter of three years? Where did the momentum go?

The answer to these questions is not an all-encompassing one

The first of the many reasons probably lies in the loss of their charismatic Dutch coach Sjoerd Marijne, who decided to pack his bags after Tokyo as he didn't want to stay away from his family in a high-pressure job. Marijne had created a very committed, happy unit that roared in Tokyo and Schopman, also from the Netherlands, was his assistant at that point. It looked like a smooth transition of role to her.

But clearly, she has struggled to get the balance right even though to her credit, the team did rise to its highest ever world number six standing on the back of some good performances.

And that's why none could be faulted for believing that this team ought to have made it to Paris in the Asian Games last year, where a gold was needed to seal the deal.

Instead, the Indians brought home a bronze, one would say a medal nonetheless but then, it was just that, a medal which did not fetch them the bigger prize on offer.

That result should have set alarm bells ringing but call it would be a hustle for the team and that decades of hard work has come undone in a matter of months. And HI has a lot to answer as well for its own role

There were murmurs of rift in the side and the currently 29year-old did not mince words in saying that only the coach, the team management and the selectors knew just why she was being ignored. A nagging hamstring injury had a role to play perhaps but her exclusion from the Asian Games squad was still a sur-prise and she made her dis-pleasure clear especially after making a strong case for come-back with 18 goals in the National Games. What followed was HI's bizarre decision to appoint her as the coach of sub-junior players despite the fact that she had not vet retired. She accepted the role but refused to give up on a possible comeback on the field. Seasoned defender and penalty corner specialist Deep Grace Ekka and drag-flicker Gurjit Kaur also made way for younger players but the experiment didn't yield the desired result, as was visible here.

ped, Deep Grace, after talking about how devastated she felt following the Asian Games heartbreak, opted out of the Olympic Qualifiers for personal reasons.

The two were key players for India in Tokyo even though one could argue that the team management was entitled to take a punt on youth. Their replacements — Deepika and Udita -, however, lacked consistency. 'Deepika is young and doesn't have that experience, while Udita has just one slap shot. There is no variation," said former India captain Ajitpal Singh. "I don't know why the Indian team management didn't select Deep Grace and Gurjit, who are very good from penalty corners and also have the experience

But for any fair assessment, the team will have to first overcome the agony of missing out on an Olympics. And that wound will take a while to heal.

Both Gao and Dhillon secured a Paris Games quota each for their respective country.

Dhillon's compatriot Maheshwari Chauhan settled for the bronze with 43, while Ganemat Sekhon, the other Indian shooter in the final, ended in fourth position with 30.

To begin with, Dhillon was on top of the table with six out of six targets. The Indian continued to lead the final with 14 hits, remaining two ahead of Gao. However, in what was turning out to be an engrossing final, Dhillon then missed two targets as Gao went in lead for the first time in the competition.

Outside of a great honey-moon to start 2023, Lydia Ko had a year she'd pretty much like to forget. She struggled mightily on the golf course after winning three times the previous season, and on several occasions left the 18th green at a tournament in tears.

Ko, a 19-time LPGA Tour winner, two-time major champion and still only 26, will have a great chance to bounce back this weekend at the Hilton Grand Vacations Tournament of Champions on the Lake Nona course she now calls home.

Ko played bogey-free for a 5under 67 as temperatures began to cool in the LPGA's season opener, and she heads into the weekend alongside Japan's Ayaka Furue (71) in a share of the 36hole lead. They were at 8-under 136.

Scotland's Gemma Dryburgh (68) and Mexico's Gaby Lopez, à former TOC champion who shot 71, are two shots back. Defending champion Brooke Henderson and Alexa Pano - at 19, the youngest player in this week's field - will begin the weekend three shots out of the lead. Both shot 70 on Friday.

Ko tasted success elsewhere in 2023, winning an event on the Ladies International) and an unofficial mixed-team tournament alongside the PGA Tour's Iason Day late in the year. That gave her the confidence she was searching for.

Her results on the LPGA were a mess. After a tie for sixth to begin her season in Thailand last February, Ko teed it up in 19 other LPGA events, with only one other top-10 finish. She failed to qualify for the year-ending CME Group Tour Championship, which was features LPGA winners from the past two years - Ko's game appears strong, and very steady. She ripped a 3-wood into the par-5 ninth hole to set up an eagle from 9 feet and finished strongly with a 4-hybrid to 15 feet to run in one last birdie at the 18th hole. She missed only one green on a challenging day. Ko and her fellow LPGA pros will be tested this weekend with a cold front expected to drop temperatures into the low 40s Fahrenheit. On Friday, she and a few other late finishers, including Furue, dealt with rain at the end of the round.

"It wasn't easy, especially the wind picking up after nine holes," Ko said. "So that's going to be the mindset for the next couple days ... But definitely glad that I'm done and it's still raining outside."

One season after leading the LPGA in total strokes gained on the field, Ko slipped to 56th last season. Ko is close enough to be thinking about the World Golf Hall of Fame - she is two points away, with victories counting as one point and majors two - and she enters a new season refreshed, with a new coach (Si Woo Lee) and boosted confidence. Furue, a 23-year-old who is a LPGA victory at the 2022 Scottish Open, did not play as well as she did a day earlier, when she opened with a tournament-record 65. But she managed to hang in there in more difficult conditions. Furue did not make her first birdie until the 12th hole, and one more birdie on the shortened par-5 15th carried her to an under-par round. The LPGA members play 72 holes of stroke play in their season opener, doing so alongside a field of 50 athletes and celebrities who compete in a separate division using a Modified Stableford points system.

Annika Sorenstam, a 72-time winner on the LPGA and a Lake Nona resident, is tied with former NHL player Jeremy Roenick for first among the celebrities, with 75 points. Former MLB pitcher Derek Lowe, who clipped Sorenstam in a playoff two years ago, had one of his best rounds, shooting the equivalent of 70 on Friday.

UTPAL KUMAR'S treatise on emerging India is a compelling read to put its past in perspective and understand its future trajectory ndia is on the cusp of a transformation. Nothing speaks Lthis more than the sense of exhilaration in the air ahead of Ram Mandir inauguration in Ayodhya. There may be a small section which is associating the event with a particular political party, but largely across India, people are mostly engulfed in a sense of warm comfort that finally their revered God will be in a home of his own. That's not it, there is a strong conviction even among the most elite and educated class that the Ram Mandir inauguration marks a moment of civilisational awakening in India. It is this India which is confident about its roots that Utpal Kumar is writing about in his latest book, Bharat Rising: Dharma, Democracy, Diplomacy.

As someone who has lived through the 1990s and 2000s and grown up watching Doordarshan, studied from NCERT textbooks and watched TV debates with one-sided members, the current India seems like a fundamentally changed country. When Kumar writes about this new India, he starts by outlining the characteristics of the Old India first. The old India refers to India under Congress rule where Jawaharlal Nehru may have been personally active only until his death in 1964 but the remnants of Nehruvian state continued to shine for nearly 50 years thereafter. Even Atal Bihari Vajpayee, a Prime Minister from the Sangh fold, hasn't been spared by Kumar for being a Lutyens insider after all. The real change begins only with the current Prime Minister Narendra Modi who despite ruling for two consecutive terms hasn't once bothered to co-opt the Lutyens coterie and vice Kumar points out the excesses of

in almost every single domain of Indian life religion, including domestic politics and international politics. He notes how an empowered section of historians continued to build their scholarship with no evidence in hand except their access to power corridors and their poor scholarship of cross-citing each other exclusively. The Indian state in its desperation to please the Left-'liberal' lobbies world over, chose secularism which turned out to be Hindumisic in all its glory. Whether it was the forced imposition of personal laws on only Hindus, or the violence against Brahmins and Dalits, or even the insertion of the word 'secular' undemocratically by the Indira Gandhi government during Emergency in the Constitution, the Indian state has done more to damage the civilisational fabric of this country than to actually make India more egalitarian in character for all the religions.

Kumar's book has focused on three important pillars of new India which include - Dharma, Democracy and Diplomacy. Each of them have been addressed through twelve eclectic essays that are a must-read for every young Indian in today's date. Revisionist scholarship can sometimes pave the way for a more confident and self-secure polity. For instance, when Kumar talks about the "three musketeers" of India's freedom struggle - Subhas Chandra Bose, VD Savarkar and BR Ambedkar and how they were personally hounded by Gandhi-Nehru regime for presenting an justifies India's current quest to gather tangible power something Bose actually did and also stay aware of the danger of pan-Islamism, something which Ambedkar warned about. Similarly when Kumar calls Marxist scholarship on India as a project to declare it as a "Railway Station" where no one is native and everyone including the themselves have migrated, then it leads to a reckoning as to why the positioning of India as a civilisational state which it rightfully is leads to so much discomfort among the Left-'liberals' today.

Kumar's attention is not limited to domestic politics or dharma debates alone. He shifts his thoughts to the domain of international politics where early Indian leaders' failure to read the political undercurrents has caused significant strategic damage to India As an Indian who gradgingly India. As an Indian who grudgingly reach, I can't but agree wholeheartedly with him. At a time when Beijing was courting Western powers to build its strength by showing them the chimera of an accommodative China, India was busy putting its foot on the diplomatic axe. We failed to read Mao's aggression, we were busy identifying the good Pakistani from the bad Pakistani, and we kept on ignoring the friendly Japan and sympathetic US in the process. Kumar highlights this while also alternative idea of free India, then it cautioning that India's rise is not something to which US should be expected to commit unconditionally. Among other gems that this book offers, this one stands out for its sheer truth value. If China slows down, the daggers will be out for India's rise and that's already started to happen if we look at the West's attitude towards India lately. We must always keep this in mind while focusing on our long-term Overall, Kumar's book is a sincere attempt in critiquing the old shibboleths and explaining why the new India must get rid of them to enable its rise globally. Every single country that has become a formidable power in the world had a set of people who were proud of their civilisational bedrocks and believed that they are destined for great things. In India, too much energy has been spent in pleasing the international lobbies - whether it includes nitpickers who cajole India to appease Islamists or the international press that vents out its looks at China today in terms of its hatred towards strong governments Kumar has befittingly exposed them without any mercy at all. His book will be one for the keeps which must be read by every young Indian mind today. A great intellectual churn is going on and Utpal Kumar's contribution to this would be

EXCERPTS FROM THE BOOK

In Romance of the Three Kingdoms, a Chinese classic, there is a story of third century BC to the Zhuge Liang, a general of the Shu kingdom. As the story goes, the general finds his fortress city of Xicheng besieged by a much superior army of the Wei kingdom. Finding it difficult to hold on to the fort, Zhuge does the unthinkable: he gets all the city gates opened and asks his soldiers to disguise themselves as ordinary householders and go about their daily lives in full view of the advancing Wei army. Zhuge himself sits atop a city gate, playing 'qin', a Chinese string instrument. Confused, the Wei forces dare not enter the gates, suspecting some sort of suspecting some sort of ambush awaiting them. They, instead, make a hurried withdrawal.
While one should desist from robotically applying historical patterns.

historical patterns, much less an old tale, to understand present-day China, the story does provide an overarching view about how the Chinese mind works: that China may not always mean what it says, and it can do what it vehemently denies in public. This makes China a difficult country to comprehend, more so if one is alien to its history and culture. The communist cocktail, present in China for over a century now and in power since 1949, has further given a heady turn to the already intricate Chinese mind. Today, as the militaries of India and China are stuck in a standoff-like situation for more than three years at the Line of Actual Control [LAC] in eastern Ladakh, India needs to crack the Chinese code faster than others. It needs to understand why China would never say never to a neighbour's territory that it strongly believes it can have least lay claims at. And, why invariably finds itself on the wrong side of the dragon. Explaining the innate imperialist streak in China, eminent historian R.C. Majumdar wrote in The Organiser, Diwali issue, 1965: "Thanks to the systematic recording of historical facts by the Chinese themselves, an almost unique achievement in oriental countries [...] we are in a position to follow present day, a period of more than 2,200 years... It is characteristic of China that if a region once acknowledged her nominal suzerainty even for a short period, she would regard it as a part of her empire forever and would automatically revive her claim over it even after a thousand years whenever there was a chance of enforcing it." Sadly, for most part of its post-Independence history, scholars like R.C. Majumdar were viciously targeted and hounded out by the Leftist gang of intellectuals who found instant political patronage in the Nehruvian ecosystem. This new intellectual class, despite its proclaimed emphasis on proclaimed emphasis on scientific temper and rational academic rigour, was attuned to give preference to ideology over truth.

India, thus, failed to produce real experts on China. There is no doubt a few brilliant Indian minds explaining China, but they exist not because of Chinese Studies in India but despite them. To add to it, becoming an independent-minded China expert isn't an easy exercise. As Michael Pillsbury writes in The Hundred-Year Marathon: China's Secret Strategy to Replace America as the Global Superpower, "It has long been known among China scholars that the people most trusted to report on China are those academics, journalists and writers who have been denied visas into the country. The rest routinely make compromises, consciously subconsciously, to maintain

No wonder, India still doesn't a thorough, annex, intrude into, or at comprehensive the proverbial elephant China'. Most scholars who masquerade as China experts, especially in the field of academia, are Sinophiles, who blindly admire Chinese system and culture, are often in awe of them, and many a times compromised by Chinese favours!

Tt is rare to find out from book ⊥readers those who have not read at least a dozen spy novels in their youth. Authors ranging from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (the Scotland born writer credited with the creation of Sherlock Holmes and his associate John Watson), Agatha Christie, Ian Fleming, Ken Follet, Frederick Forsyth, Robert Ludlum etc were a craze for generations belonging to the pre-1980 era. The National Network of Doordarshan had telecast the series "The telecast the series "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" during late 1980s and it had considerable viewership. Agatha Christie was rated as the best-selling novelist by none other than conservative literary critics. Once you start reading books by Christie to Ludlum, chances of leaving the books midway through are bleak because of the heights to which these works elevate readers and the style in which these authors tell the stories. The spy novels by authors from USA and UK had focused on two World Wars and the subsequent Cold War which kept the world tense and panicky. There was no literature in these works of fiction except the possibilities of science and technology which were utilized to its full extent by the authors. Thus, we had James Bond wearing a wrist watch with which he could communicate with his Boss sitting in London from anywhere in the world.

These books had varieties in them. The plots did not limit to just Capitalism v Communism but the two World Wars too provided enough canvas for the authors. Ken Follet's "Key To Rebecca" and "Eye of the Needle" are based on Second World War and retain their freshness even today. The Day of the Jackal by Frederick Forsyth is based on a real life story featuring the then President of France General Charles de Gaulle. It is a chilling account of the death of Pope John Paul I, the last Italian to be ordained as the Holy See and the boss of the Vatican Bank. The book is the result of nine years of painstaking research by Posner and it is as exciting and thrilling as any work of fiction. Posner's another book "Case Closed: Lee Harvey Oswald and the Assassination of JFK" has been described as a classic work of investigation and research. Spy novels are a rare commodity in India, despite the fact that the Moghul Rule and the freedom fight against the British colonial masters offer a wide canvas to prospective authors. ingredients and raw materials for our spy masters.

Indian authors are yet to make use of the possibilities while one of the works by Forsyth had Islamic terrorism as theme (The Afghan). The book featured India in certain chapters and it was a runaway success in the subcontinent.

Though B Raman, a reputed counter terrorism expert working with RAW had forewarned the policymakers through his treatise 'A Terrorist State As a Frontline Ally", our own Flemings and Follets failed to see the scope of the topic. It took many years for an Indian author to hit bookshelves decades and SWORDPLAY by Bappaditya Chakravarty is the book which we were waiting for. The book is published by Garuda

Prakashan, which shot into fame by bringing out the pathbreaking work "Delhi Riots 2020-The Untold Story", authored by Monika Arora, Sonali Chitalkar Prerna

Malhotra. SwordPlay is a chilling account of extremism of the highest order involving Islamic and Khalistani terrorists capable of doing anything for realizing their objectives. What the world missed with the collapse of Communism as well as the Iron Curtain has come back to haunt us. SwordPlay has everything including the terrorists, various schools of terrorism, drug and agents, cold blooded murders and experts in double crossing. Set in America, Europe, Asia (particularly Pakistan, Afghanistan, Iraq, south east Asia, India and Hong Kong), the book takes the reader for a trouble -free flight from the opening page itself. Please do not ask whether this is a work of fiction or a flower that bloomed in a fertile mind. There is a proverb that states that no questions should be asked about the authenticity of a work of fiction. The undercover agent Paramjyot Singh and his deputies declare an inter-continental war against an axis of Islamist-Khalistani terrorists and tuhat forms the storyline..

The Khalistani terrorists have managed to mobilize a nuclear weapon from the country's western border to Haridwar under the guise of a bike-rally for unity of religions. The spy master Brigadier Paramjyot Singh is the person who briefs the country's top political authority about the operation which has been launched to save millions. The narration shifts from Canada to Marseilles to New Delhi and central India as the plot unfolds. To bring in a feeling of western spy thrillers, the author has added steaming black coffee, bourbon whiskey and what not. The only items missing are the conventional Aston Martin and other sleek sports cars. SwordPlay may not be in the same league as that of Eye of the Needle, Day of the Jackal, Odessa File or Bourn Identity. But it is interesting and readers will enjoy it. Chakravarty has made it easy for a movie maker to make a suspense thriller and the film to be made out of this plot has the potential to fill the moolah. Hope he writes more as with IS, JeM, LeT and Khalistani Forces working overtime to create subversion across India. One more important observation to be noted is that forces are out to disintegrate India by hook or by crook. This has been brought to light by Rajeev Malhotra through his works "Breaking India" (co-author Aravindan Neelakandan) and "Snakes in the Ganga" (co-author Vijaya Viswanathan). Chronicling the journey from Rath Yatra to consecration, BISWAJEET BANERJEE captures the perseverance, struggle, and unyielding commitment of leaders who shaped the Ram Mandir movement he journey towards the consecration of Lord Ram in Ayodhya on January 22 is a testament to a five century-long arduous struggle. This historic moment, marked by the completion of the grand Ram temple, is the culmination of a tumultuous saga characterised by disputes, violence, and prolonged legal battles. The path to this monumental achievement was paved by the unwavering perseverance of devotees and a landmark court ruling that resolved long standing conflicts. The Ram Janmabhoomi struggle had its roots deeply embedded in history, with the dispute over the site being a focal point for centuries. It revolved around the belief that the Babri Masjid was constructed on the birthplace of Lord Ram, becoming a flashpoint for communal tensions and triggering a series of events that defined the course of the struggle. The perseverance of the devotees emerged as a driving force that sustained the movement across generations. The unwavering faith in Ayodhya as the sacred birthplace of Lord Ram fueled the determination of those involved in the movement. Over decades, they encountered challenges ranging from political opposition to societal discord, yet their commitment remained steadfast.

The movement also witnessed the instrumental role played by key figures who became central to its narrative. These individuals not only dedicated their lives to the cause but also navigated the intricacies and challenges of the struggle. Their leadership, often in the face of adversity, was crucial in steering the movement towards its ultimate goal.

A landmark court ruling in 2019 provided a decisive resolution to the legal disputes surrounding the site. The judgment acknowledged the historical and religious significance of the land, paving the way for the construction of the Ram temple. This legal victory marked a turning point in the struggle, offering a path for reconciliation and unity.

As Ayodhya prepares for the consecration of the Ram temple, it stands as a symbol of triumph over adversity and a testament to the indomitable spirit of those who dedicated their lives to the cause. The completion of the majestic temple signifies not only a religious milestone but also reflects the resilience and determination that shaped the history of the Ram Janmabhoomi struggle. The saga witnessed significant contributors who played pivotal roles in shaping the movement and steering it towards success. Among them are key figures whose journeys reflect the intricacies and challenges faced during this transformative period.

LAL KRISHNA ADVANI

RATH YATRA ARCHITECT The Rath Yatra led by former Deputy Prime Minister Lal Krishna Advani in 1984 is widely regarded as a watershed moment in the Ram temple movement. In the aftermath of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's assassination, Advani's Rath Yatra became a significant catalyst, solidifying the roots of the movement. Despite the BJP winning only two seats in the 1984 Lok Sabha elections, Advani assumed leadership, emphasising Hindutva policies. Under his guidance, the BJP included the goal of building the Ram temple in its manifesto. In 1990, Advani announced the Rath Yatra from Somnath in Gujarat to Ayodhya in Uttar Pradesh. The journey, filled with fervent support, encountered obstacles when Lalu Prasad, then Chief Minister of Bihar, arrested Advani. Nevertheless, the Rath Yatra had already set the movement in motion, becoming a defining moment in the history of the Ram temple struggle.

MURLI MANOHAR JOSHI THE TORCHBEARER

After Advani, Murli Manohar Joshi emerged as a significant leader actively involved in the Ram temple movement. Present during the demolition of the disputed structure in Ayodhya, Joshi played a crucial role in shaping the movement's strategies. His involvement extended to studying every aspect related to the Ram Mandir movement, contributing to meticulous planning and implementation. Joshi's influence reached a peak during a meeting held in Lucknow in December 1992, where he urged people to go to Ayodhya the next day. His resolute stance, expressed in statements like "there is no power that can stop the construction of the Ram temple,' underscored his commitment to the

KALYAN SINGH UNWAVERING COMMITMENT

In 1991-92, at the peak of the Ram Mandir movement, then UP Chief Minister Kalyan Singh played a crucial role in galvanising Ram devotees. Initially expected to refrain from participating in the yatra to avoid potential arrest, Singh surprised everyone by joining the procession near Hanumangarhi. His impassioned address emphasised the relentless pursuit of building the Ram temple, further energising the movement. Despite the movement's success, Kalyan Singh faced political repercussions and lost his position due to his unwavering commitment to the cause. Unfortunately, he passed away in August 2021, missing the consecration of the Ram temple.

VINAY KATIYAR Bajrang dal Commander

In 1984, Vinay Katiyar assumed the role of the first president of Bajrang Dal, formed for the Ram Mandir movement. Tasked with rallying people for the cause, Katiyar travelled from village to village, organising meetings, and garnering support. These efforts bore fruit as, under Vinay Katiyar's leadership, Bajrang Dal successfully connected people across the country for the Ram Mandir movement. His political stature grew postmovement, leading him to become the National General Secretary of the BJP. He served as an elected Member of Parliament thrice from the Faizabad (Ayodhya) Lok Sabha seat.

UMA BHARTI The Firebrand Leader

Known for her fiery speeches during times of crisis, Uma Bharti played a pivotal role in the Ram Janmabhoomi movement. Post the movement, Bharti remained active in politics, serving as a minister in the central government of Atal Bihari Vajpayee and Narendra Modi. She also held the position of CM of Madhya Pradesh from 2003 to 2004.

SADHVI RITAMBHARA

VOICE OF PASSION
As the second firebrand woman leader of the Ram Mandir movement, Sadhvi Ritambhara's impassioned speeches resonated across the country. Despite her withdrawal from active politics, she continues her spiritual journey, running an ashram named Vatsalya Gram in Vrindavan.

ASHOK SINGHAL CHIEF ARCHITECT

Ashok Singhal, the international president of Vishwa Hindu Parishad for 20 years, is considered one of the chief architects of the Ram Janmabhoomi movement. His strategic planning and leadership were instrumental in shaping the movement, including the organisation of the parliament held at Vigyan Bhawan in Delhi in 1984. Singhal's role extended to leading the Kar Sevaks who demolished the disputed structure in 1992. He passed

Real brothers from Kolkata, Ram Kumar Kothri, and Sharad Kumar Kothri played significant roles in the movement. They were part of the initial group of Karsevaks in 1990, raising the saffron flag on the disputed structure. Tragically, both brothers were shot during the kar seva on November 2, 1990, becoming martyrs and inspiring a surge of support for the movement."

CHAMPAT RAI BEHIND-THE-SCENES ARCHITECT

Champat Rai, the General Secretary of Ram Mandir Trust, worked diligently behind the scenes, gathering documentary evidence related to the Ram temple even before the demolition of the disputed structure. Rai's meticulous efforts included studying thousands of documents, reading scriptures, and providing crucial evidence to lawyers fighting the legal battle for Ram Janmabhoomi.

PRAVEEN TOGADIA FIREBRAND VHP LEADER

Alongside Vinay Katiyar, Praveen Togadia actively contributed to the Ram Mandir movement as a leader associated with Vishwa Hindu Parishad. Recognised for his dynamic speeches, Togadia played a significant role in rallying public support and fostering enthusiasm during the movement. Although currently not affiliated with Vishwa Hindu Parishad, Togadia's legacy remains connected to the fervor of the Ram Janmabhoomi movement.

A forgotten war: Looking back, looking forward

m he}$ Russia-Ukraine war, which began in February 2022, is about to enter its third year. When Russia invaded Ukraine, not even those within President Vladimir Putin's inner circle believed that the war would last for such an extended period.

Why has the West provoked Russia? Can Putin reshape his image as a strongman after the bloody war? Is Volodymyr Zelenskyy a winner? It is certain that, under the leadership of the US, the West has been attempting to Russia. Putin, being a former KGB man, is sensitive to the limits of security and the opportune time to intervene. Russia can't be further bullied by the West. The reason behind this is that the West, especially the US, has its own internal problems and external responsibilities.

For Putin, losing is not an option. He is desperate to win not only against Ukraine but also against the West. As temperatures drop to freezing points, forces on both sides are gearing up for hardened battles.

For Zelenskyy, the war, despite being a significant financial burden and humanitarian crisis, hardly makes any difference. The reason is that Ukraine, as a frontline state to Russia, has been reeling under the threat of war for years. Ukrainians know what they are destined for; they have to fight for their survival against the onslaught of a Russian invasion, whether today or tomorrow. The international community still recalls what Zelenskyy aired just before the onset of the war in 2022. He warned the West not to create panic about the buildup of Russian forces on the border of Ukraine. However, US President Joe Biden then clearly stated that he believed "Russia could attack its neighbour next month." Ultimately, Putin did attack Ukraine, signaling his intention to dislodge and denazify the country.

A war-monger from the beginning, Putin employed numerous narratives to justify his invasion of Ukraine. Initially, he claimed that Nazi," controlled by the "Little

Another lawmaker called for the establishment of a "modern analogy to the Nuremberg Tribunal" as Moscow geared up to Ukraine. summary, the language used various Russian top leaders, officials, pro-Kremlin journalists, writers, and especially Putin himself, was absolutely shocking.

Clearly, the term Nazi was an unbelievable assertion about country whose leader, Zelenskyy, is Jewish. Interestingly, just before the war's onset last fall, Zelenskyy had passed a law combating antisemitism in his country. Certainly, the war between Russia and Ukraine is a battle "openly neo-Nazi" and "pro- current conflict, propelled by Putin's belligerence and Nazification of Ukraine and the major world powers to doing overtly or covertly.

stop the Muscular Man of Moscow. By the time Kiev took action, Moscow was already well ahead in launching the invasion, ostensibly in the name of protecting the ethnic Russian population in the Donbas region. Indeed, Putin had planned it long in advance. According to many experts, he remained quiet for nearly eight years after the annexation of Crimea from February to March 2014.

As John Simpson rightly said, "The annexation of Crimea was the smoothest invasion of modern times. It was over before the outside world realised it had even started." The occupation of Crimea had occurred entirely Ukraine's government is of wills and might. The stealth. Putin is a world-class strategist, a true "Spy Guy". On many occasions, the West arrogance, caught the had miscalculated his moves, attention of the media and he, too, had failed to asserted that President Biden showman Zelenskyy, who had understand how the US and and American officials are scarcely understood how to its allies in Europe might the address and when to convince react to what he had been

When the current war had just begun, both Bill Powell and Naved Jamali strongly argued that "Putin has never lost a war." They further pointed out that "during past conflicts in Chechnya, Georgia, Syria, and Crimea, over his two decades in power, Putin succeeded by giving his armed forces clear, achievable military objectives that would allow him to declare victory credibly in the eyes of the Russian people and a wary watching world. His latest initiative in Ukraine is unlikely to be any different." So, these are the strong credentials of Putin, who has delivered significant victories to his fellow countrymen since his accession to power in August 1999, when the first 2036. President of the Russian Federation, Boris Yeltsin, entrusted him with the job of Prime Minister after the tumultuous breakdown of the erstwhile USSR. The political atmosphere in Yeltsin's resignation, paving the way for Putin to take over as the Acting President of the country. Subsequently, he won the presidential election in March 2000, becoming the second President of the Russian Federation. Since then, he has been the President of the country, except for a full term from 2008-2012 when his friend Dmitry Medvedev occupied the post, simply because the Russian Constitution barred a person from remaining as President for a third consecutive term.

However, this provision no longer exists (thanks to a war has reached a stalemate. referendum conducted in 2021), and Putin can continue focus on the Israel-Hamas to remain as President until carefully. He is well-versed in all the routes and dangers that might emerge from the current war. An aging Biden and NATO members in Europe, not closely aligned (as many, like Germany, have definitive interests and dependence on Russia), may fail to check Putin's Kremlin this year in Ukraine.

Yes, it is true that the offensive moves from both Ukraine and Russia have failed to attain a decisive victory for either party throughout the year 2023. However, this has led to a narrative suggesting that the Given the current global conflict since October 7 of last year, discussions and efforts for an immediate solution to the situation in the taken precedence, pushing backseat in global politics.

material and military advantage of both parties will determine the course of action this year. The West, especially the US (facing a presidential election on November 5), will face a challenging time, and the rest of Europe, particularly NATO members, will need to decide whether to provide substantial aid to Kiev for a credible offensive in 2025 against Moscow or concede an irrecoverable advantage to Putin. Putin is expecting and planning his grand strategies accordingly. However, a new strategy can protect the sovereign frontiers of Ukraine and prevent Russia from winning the war.

Peace continues to elude Ukraine, with Russia on a warpath and Putin showing no inclination to negotiate. Since his entry into the Kremlin, Putin has been consistently opposed to the West. The futile goal of the West so far has been to defeat Russia and humiliate Putin, but this approach is no longer effective. Engagement with Russia by the West must be realistic and flexible, offering a sustainable guarantee that Russia's leadership is acknowledged, and further NATO expansion in Europe is halted to avoid encircling the country. It is time to address mutual interests, and Washington should adopt a forward-looking approach if Putin is willing to abandon his aggressive stance.

Importantly, the West needs to understand that Putin and the Kremlin, under his leadership, do not speak for all Russian people, even though it may seem so for now. America should have learned by now how to navigate dealings with leaders like Putin. If Biden returns to power in 2025, he must remember that in Putin's unpredictable world, expecting the unexpected is

Amid the Russia-Ukraine conflict's complexity, it is crucial for the West to adopt a pragmatic approach. ind defines the functional mandate of a being and then steers through the journey of life. All happenings out in open originate in mind by way of arousal of desire and thereby related thoughts, ideation, articulation, and the will to act upon. Also, it directs the mind how to engage with the world around, and react or respond to external stimuli. It is again our mind, which carries forward the legacy carried over from the past. That makes a deep imprint in our mind and psyche, which sets the terms of the way we perceive issues in hand, and accordingly act upon. But mind is just an instrument. It has no drive of its own as it doesn't have a light of its own either. It draws light from the fundamental element of consciousness. Mind, in fact, is just like earth mass, which transforms a seed sown into a plant. Similarly, mind acts takes off on feed primarily drawn from two sources – thought seeds in store reflecting indwelling desire trends and habit tendencies, coming as it may as Karmic carryover from the past, and external influences. In so far as earth mass is concerned, the farmer is in control of what seed he plants, depending on what to grow based on environmental and soil conditions. Mind's control mechanisms is, however, complex. Invariably, every being is born with a preconditioned mind, bound by desire trends, habit tendencies, likes, dislikes, prejudices and passions. That tempts the Ahamkara element - the sense of 'I' that brings in doer element in a being, and which drives all actions on our part - identify itself with the inherent tendencies and passionately follows them as if that would be its end game. It doesn't allow looking beyond for a reality check. Consequently, one remains slave to inherent mind traits. But at the same time every being carries an inherent sense of freedom. Also, human beings are armed with exclusive privilege to guide their actions by choice and discrimination. The two, read together, offers the opportunity to transcend imitations of mind through conscious efforts, when it gets submerged in the omniscient fundamental element of consciousness. Whence, it knows no limits as full landscape of mind becomes accessible. Otherwise, a clouded mind has access to hardly 5 to 7 percent of mind space. You then become master of your mind, and use it as an instrument. The choice is yours. Mind, in fact, is a versatile equipment, which offers window to self-reflect, identify and acknowledge one's limiting tendencies, and then address them through fresh educative inputs. All that is needed is to get into dhyana mode, turn your attention inwards, when the limiting tendencies will come into sight. Following the process further, one needs to get into pratyahara mode - get disengaged from the indwelling thought seeds that otherwise prove limiting. You then become master of your own self.

Long back, someone having met successive failures, and having lost all hope in life, came asking: "Sir, what is in store of my destiny. What wrong I did that I have been through such an unpleasant ordeal for so long?" Well, you have been a victim of your own self-undoing acts. "How?" He countered. You are born in fiery sign Aries, with its lord too in another fiery sign. That makes you haughty, impulsive, aggressive, and erratic. You wish to live in a demanding mode on your whims and fancy. You are self-willed and overconfident about your capability. Adverse aspect of Mars over Jupiter points to your inflated ego. That binds you to self-defined beliefs and perceptions. It doesn't allow the space necessary to look beyond for a reality check. You are not keen to entertain advisory and counsel, of elders and superiors. It is difficult for you to digest things don't happen on expected lines. Moon opposite Venus makes you emotionally too much sensitive, which makes you get overexercised even on trivial issues. You keep unnecessarily mulling on them much beyond their due. Consequently priority preferences get compromised. You jump into action without applying proper forethought. Moon being in a dual sign, you lack the focus necessary to put in consistent efforts. The result is there to see. "Is it possible to overcome the above shortcomings that are certainly there in me?" He asked. You need to pursue dhyana regularly to fry the indwelling thought seeds that are limiting and then redefine the thought process afresh seeking regular counselling.
